STATE OF CHAOS EXISTS IN CHINA; BLOOD FLOWING

Yuan-Shi-Kai Declines to Accept Premiership--No Tangible Head of Government.

BULLETS, SWORD AND FIRE HAVE TAKEN 50,000 LIVES

Reports From Hankow Indicate That the Slaughter Has Been Wholesale—Cities and Provinces Going Over to the Rebels, and the Cry Is for a Republic.

ARMISTICE OF TEN WEEKS ARRANGED WITH REBELS

London, November 5.—The Daily Telegraph's Pekin correspondent says h is reliably informed that Yuan Shi Kai has practically arranged a ten weeks' armistice with the rebel generalissimo. This will permit Yuan to come immediately to Pekin and form a cabinet. He will also attempt to solve the present inextricable confusion.

A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Pekin says that in a conference at Hankow the revolutionists presented a note to Yuan Shi Kai, demanding that the imperial family be transported to Jehol, and that the provinces be granted autonomy.

Pekin, November 5.—Yuan Shi Kai still declines to accept the premiership, although assured of the support of the national assembly, and General Chang, in command of the Lanchau troops. Both the assembly and General Chang, however, insist that when the parliament is elected the premier shall be chosen by that body.

In the meantime affairs here are in a state of chaos. No tangible head of the government is visible. The government urgently needs funds, and hopes that the Franco- Belgian loan will be forthcoming to enable the military operations and the administration to be carried on.

The international group refuses to supply war funds. The government is urging the group to advance money to allay the threatened financial and public deadlock in Pekin, as it is feared the non-circulation of money will cause serious hardships to the coolies and the lower classes, which possibly might lead to local disturbances. To this the group is inclined to accede.

The Situation In North China.

The third division of the army, stationed at Chang Chung Fu, is under orders to proceed to Lanchau, the government evidently hoping that the presence there of a loyal division would have a salutary effect on General Chang's men. The transference of this division is now going on, and the attitude of the men is eagerly awaited, as it will probably turn the scales in north China. Elsewhere in the north, excepting in Pekin, the soldiers generally sympathize with the Lanchau movement.

General Wu Lu Cheng, governor-elect of Shan Si, has informed the government that he can persuade the Shan Si rebels to accept the constitution, but it is feared that Wu himself is a revolutionist.

Reports from the Forbidden City show that the Manchu princes are in a pitiable state of fear and indecision. The Taotai periodically urges drastic measures, which certainly would lead to the destruction of the nobles. The presence of General Yin Tchang, the ex-war minister, has a calming effect, but only the wise counsels of the old Prince Ching have averted panic and prevented the flight of the court, or something worse.

Manchus Ready for Emergency.

Tien Tsin is quiet tonight, but four thousand Manchus are held ready for an emergency. Another edict has been issued instructing the assembly to proceed with the election of a parliament and promising to recognize the revolutionary political party.

According to reports from Chang Sha, six cities in Hu Nan province have revolted, and it is expected that the

BIRDMAN IN SIGHT OF PACIFIC OCEAN

Flight of Rodgers Across Continent Nearly Completed.

Aviator Reaches Pasadena Almost on Edge on Ocean--Today Rodgers Will Fly Out Over the Pacific and Complete Feat of Aviation.

FACTS ABOUT THE FLIGHT MADE BY AVIATOR RODGERS

New York, November 5.—Calbraith P. Rodgers, the aviator, who practically completed his ocean-to-ocean flight by landing at Pasadena, Cal., today, started from this city forty-nine days ago on what was to prove his record-making trip. In a Wright biplane he rose from the Sheepshead Bay race track at 4:25 p. m. September 17, and arrived at Pasadena at 4:10 p. m. today. He left behind him at Marshall, Mo., on October 10, a broken world's record for a cross-country flight, having traveled 1,398 miles, as against the record of 1,265 miles previously made by Harry Atwood. Rodgers' mileage over the Atwood record kept piling up day by day, until today he had eclipsed it by a total of 2,966 miles.

Figured from his actual flying time of three days ten hours and four minutes in traveling 4,231 miles, his rate of speed was 51.59 miles an hour.

Atwood's former world's record was made on August 25, 1911, when he finished his flight from St. Louis to New York, a distance of 1,265 miles.

Pasadena, Cal., November 5.—Aviator Calbraith Rodgers, approaching a successful completion of his ocean-to-ocean jaunt, soared into Pasadena at 4:04 p. m. today, 184 miles from the finish, on the last spurt of 30 miles from Pomona and from an altitude of several thousand feet landed at Tournament park.

Official figures of Rodgers' flight given by his manager, show:

Total distance, 4,231 miles; flying time, 4,924 minutes.

To Fly Out Over Pacific.

Rodgers landed at 4:10 o'clock. Tomorrow he expects to fly out over the Pacific and thus make the epoch-making feat of aviation really an ocean-to-ocean flight.

Rodgers appeared in the skyline shortly after 3 o'clock. He was sighted first by telescope from the Solar Observatory on Mount Wilson and word flashed down the mountain by telephone brought 20,000 persons to Tournament park.

Flying at a height of about 5,000 feet, Rodgers hovered over the city for a few minutes, then circled in a wide spiral and volplaned down. His landing was a signal for a rush and Rodgers was literally mobbed. Afterward the aviator declared his ribs surely would be black and blue.

Rodgers started on the last dash of his flight from Banning, California, a little town out in the desert, where his arrival had interrupted the only diversion of the year, the funeral dance of the Mojave Indians.

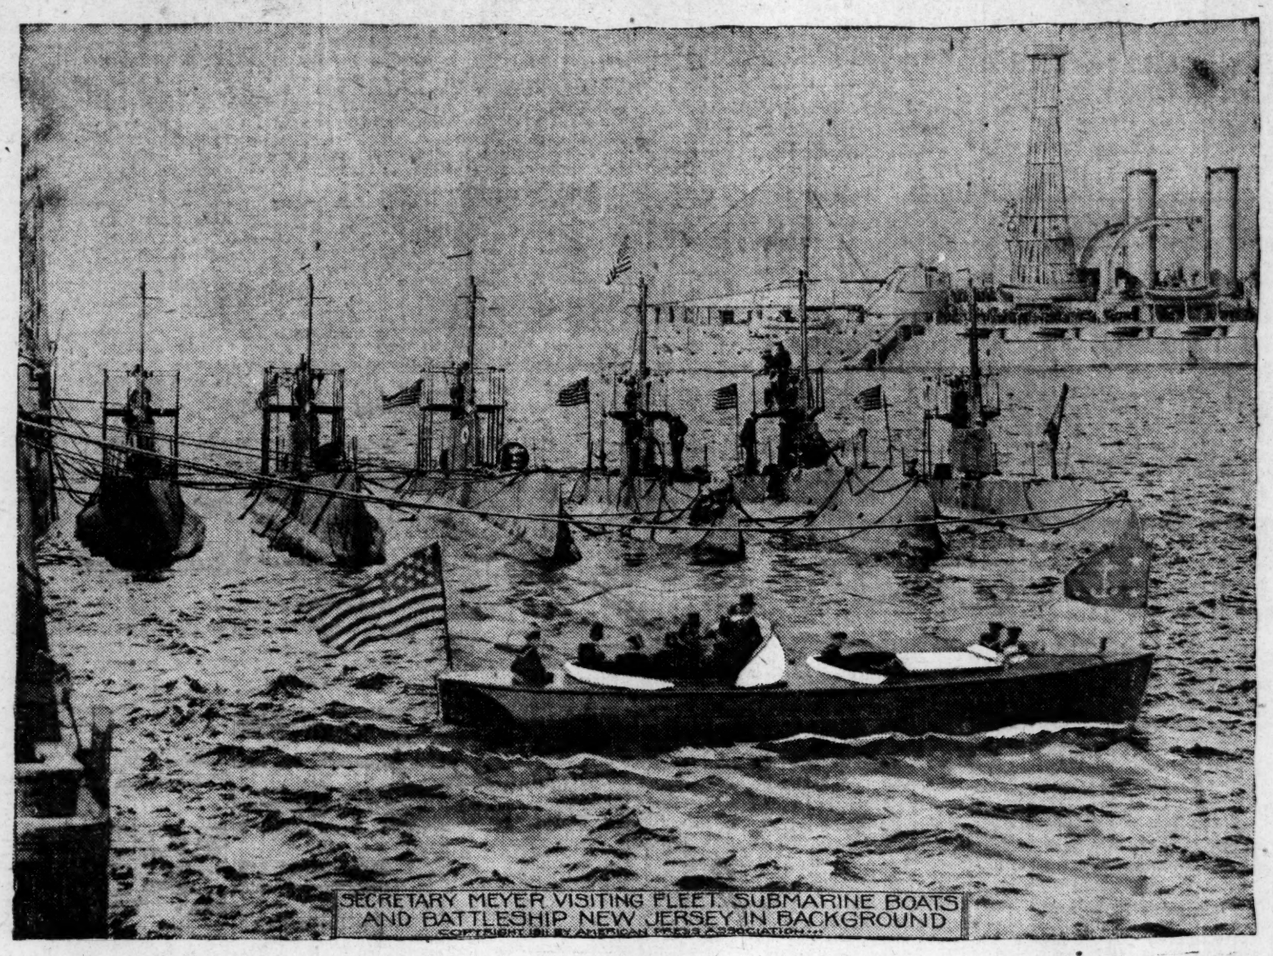

Taking the air at noon, Rodgers ascended gracefully in the face of a twenty-mile wind until he had reached an altitude of 400 feet. Then he set his course directly west and sparked his motor up to a thirty-mile gait.

Followed by Wife and Mother.

Rodgers' wife and mother, who have been following him on a special train all the way from New York, left Banning immediately afterwards. The flier arrived over Colton at 1:37 p. m., with his altitude increased to 1,000 feet, and he kept this height until he neared Pomona, 21 miles from

SECRETARY MEYER INSPECTING ARMADA IN HUDSON RIVER

SECRETARY MEYER VISITING FLEET. SUBMARINE BOATS AND BATTLESHIP NEW JERSEY IN BACKGROUND

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

When Secretary of the Navy Meyer made his inspection trip past the fleet assembled in the Hudson river, he saw every type of fighting vessel that belongs to Uncle Sam's navy. The row of quaint little submarines made a striking contrast to the dreadnoughts and other giant battleships. These diving vessels have never had a chance to show their utility in practical warfare, but navy men regard them as of great importance, as they cost comparatively little money and require but a few men to man them. They carry torpedo tubes from which torpedoes can be launched that will destroy any battleship afloat if they strike the target.

SEWANEE WANTS BIG ENDOWMENT

Rev. W. S. Claiborne Speaks at All Saints Church.

Plan Proposed by S. C. DeSaussure, and Elaborated by Bishop Nelson, Increasing Endowment by Co-Operative Work Among the Dioceses.

Pleading for a Greater University of the South, the only university in the United States that is backed by the Episcopal church, Rev. W. S. Claiborne, one of a committee of three chosen to represent to the world the history and advantages, as well as the needs, of ewanee, spoke yesterday morning at All Saints'.

Dr. Claiborne did not represent an unknown institution Sunday, nor did he speak to an unfamiliar audience, for numbered among his hearers was a large number of the University of the South alumni. The university is famous in the south for the number of national figures it has educated, among these being Archie Butt, military aide to the president; several United States senators, and a number of great lawyers and judges.

The speech explained in detail the church's desire to obtain an adequate

SPEAKERS GALORE FOR JOE BROWN

Prohis and Antis Will Take Stump for Candidate.

Bartow Willingham Expects to Devote Much Time to Campaigning for "Little Joe"--H. H. Cabaniss Will Speak at Calhoun Next Saturday.

Prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists will take the stump for former Governor Joseph M. Brown this week, which is taken by the friends of "Little Joe" to mean that the present campaign is not to be fought out on the liquor issue alone.

Bartow S. Willingham, who, as representative from Monroe county, was leader of the prohibition forces in the legislature from 1898 to 1903, will probably take the stump for the former governor the latter part of the week, and he expects to devote the greater part of his time between now and election campaigning for "Little Joe." Mr. Willingham was author of the state-wide prohibition bill which was passed by the house several years before the enaction of the present law.

Antis Also for Joe Brown.

Several old legislators who opposed the Willingham bill are expected to take the stump for the former governor. Among them is Colonel W. S. West, of Valdosta, who was for many years one of the leaders of the anti-prohibition forces in the legislature. He is supporting the former governor actively in the present campaign, as is Joe Hill Hall, of Bibb, who led the fight for a package-house substitute which he has introduced in every legislative session in which prohibition has figured.

Colonel Joe James, of Douglasville, will address a Joe Brown meeting at Dallas, Paulding county, on Wednesday.

Judge W. J. Nunnally, of Rome, will address a Joe Brown meeting at Lawrenceville tomorrow (Tuesday). Judge Nunnally, who is the son of the Rev. Dr. J. H. Nunnally, is one of the leading prohibitionists in the state. He is a good speaker and campaigner.

Hon. H. H. Cabaniss, of Atlanta, has received many invitations to make speeches for the former governor. He has not accepted but one, which is to attend and address a Joe Brown meeting at Calhoun, Gordon county, next Saturday. On the same day a score or more of big meetings will be held in the interest of the candidacy in various parts of the state.

Gid Morris May Take Stump.

It is probable that Colonel J. Gid Morris, who has opposed Governor Brown heretofore, will take the stump

BALLOT CONTEST ULTRA IMPORTANT

As the Presidential Election Is Only 12 Months Hence.

Results Tuesday Expected to Indicate the Way Political Weather Vane Is Pointing. Interest Centers in Massachusetts and Kentucky.

Although an "off" year, elections to be held in several states Tuesday are looked upon as ultra important in view of the presidential election being out twelve months hence, and reversals a year ago. Results Tuesday are expected to indicate which way the political weathervane is pointing.

Perhaps most interest centers in Kentucky and Massachusetts, although four other states elect state officers. They are Rhode Island, Maryland, Mississippi and New Mexico.

National political leaders who have aided in the Kentucky campaign say results Tuesday will be one of the best indications of the trend of political affairs that could be afforded. Not only is this because the state has had a varied political career, but because there have been no paramount state issues to divert the people's attention, they say. Democrats say they will wipe out the 7,000 majority gained by republicans in the last gubernatorial election, while republicans are almost as emphatic in announcing the 7,000 majority will come out of battle unscathed.

In Massachusetts, Eugene N. Foss, who turned the state from the republican to the democratic column when elected two years ago, claims he will be re-elected by 50,000. His opponent, Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothington, will be elected by 35,000, announces the state republican committee. The campaign has been fought largely upon national issues, with the tariff foremost.

A thousand candidates seek office in the first election New Mexico will hold as a state. Besides state officers, a judiciary and legislature must be provided.

In many other states, county and municipal elections will be held.

SHE USED ARSENIC TO SEASON FOOD

Accused of Poisoning Many Men Woman Attempts Suicide.

Physicians Think Mrs. Vermilya Will Probably Recover — Detectives On Guard to Prevent Another Attempt at Suicide.

Chicago, November 5.—Mrs. Louise Vermilya, accused of the murder by poison of Policeman Arthur Bissonette and under investigation in connection with the successive deaths of eight other persons, today was pronounced probably recovering after her attempt to end her own life by poison yesterday.

Energetic methods to counteract the effects of arsenic which Mrs. Vermilya cunningly contrived to mingle with her food in the presence of her guards yesterday probably will be successful, according to her physicians.

After the attempt at suicide, Mrs. Vermilya has not been out of the sight of one or more guards and every article she touches is first examined either by a detective or a trained nurse.

Near Nervous Collapse.

Though in a condition bordering on nervous collapse the accused woman was pronounced in fair physical condition tonight. Mindful, however, of the frequent relapses of her alleged victim, Bissonette, ending in the man's death, Dr. Van Aradale, who is in charge of the case and who also attended Bissonette, refused to say positively that she would recover.

"The woman apparently will recover," he said, "unless she has access to other supplies of arsenic or other poison. She is resourceful and cunning enough to evade her watches and drug herself again. That she should keep a deadly drug among her kitchen supplies, where it would least be suspected is a measure of her capacity to deceive. Nothing would induce me to eat anything in that house.

"Arsenic, being a mineral salt, however, is so persistent and difficult to eliminate from the system that the woman may yet succumb to the amount she has taken."

Guard of Detectives.

A guard of detectives and uniformed policemen, with a police matron and several trained nurses, are watching over Mrs. Vermilya. The woman's bed and bed clothes, her sleeping garments, her hair and everything else about her that could conceal poison,

TURKS APPEAL TO UNCLE SAM TO WARN ITALY

So-Called "Italian Barbarities" at Tripoli Brought to Notice of United States.

APPEAL OF TURKS MADE IN THE NAME OF HUMANITY

It Is Alleged That the Infuriated Italian Soldiers Are Butchering Helpless Women and Children—Charged That Italy Is Violating Rules of Civilized Warfare.

TERROR REIGNS AT TRIPOLI; TROOPS SHOOTING PEOPLE

Malta, November 5.—Steamer passengers arriving from Tripoli describe the situation there as a reign of terror. Strong military patrols are continually conducting rigorous house-to-house searches, and, on the smallest pretense, summary punishment is meted out. Many victims have been shot in their own houses. In the absence of any attempt to discriminate between friend and foe, foreigners have taken refuge in their respective consulates.

An order forbidding anyone to be out before 6 o'clock in the morning or after 6 o'clock in the evening has been strictly enforced. The Italian soldiers appear to have unlimited power, and, the passengers say, were shooting down men, women or children who dare disobey the orders. The passengers also confirm the stories of the brutality displayed by the Italians in their treatment of the Arabs.

Washington, November 5.—So-called "Italian barbarities" in Tripoli finally have been brought officially to the attention of the American government in such form that some declaration of the position of the state department in the matter now is expected. The subject was broached first in the course of a verbal statement by the Turkish ambassador to Acting Secretary Ades, and later in the day in the shape of a letter. In each case the ambassador, who declared he was acting by express cabled instructions from his government, described in detail the acts attributed to the Italian troops and protested in the name of humanity against the alleged barbarities inflicted upon helpless women and children and non-combatants by the infuriated Italian soldiers.

By order of his government, the ambassador appealed to the United States to exert itself to put a stop to practices that, he declared, were in plain violation of the rules of warfare and in contravention of the Hague convention to which the United States and Italy are parties.

Acting Secretary Ades promised to submit the protest to Secretary Knox, who is absent from Washington.

The Porte's Complaint.

The ambassodar's note was based upon a cablegram from the Turkish minister for foreign affairs, of which the following is a copy:

"Your excellency has heard the news, unfortunately confirmed, of wholesale executions of a great number of inhabitants of Tripoli, perpetrated daily by the Italian military authorities.

"The right of all able-bodied citizens to fight for the supreme defense of his invaded home in undeniable. It confers on the said citizens the character of belligerents and obliges the enemy to respect the lives of those amongst them who fall into their hands. But the Italians are violating not only the sacred principle of modern law of nations; but also the most elementary rules of civilization and humanity in shooting down the natives who have properly enlisted, and, even the innocent women and children of it, on mere suspicion—not to mention those deported by thousands.

Contrary to Rules of War.

"These acts are moreover contrary to the engagements pledged by Italy herself at the second conference of The Hague in the convention relating to the laws and customs of war which places the population and the belligerents

WHEN IT COMES TO DRINKING UNITED STATES LEADS WORLD

Washington, November 5.—Consuming more beer than any other country in the world, the United States leads all nations in the total consumption of malt liquors, wines and distilled spirits, with the enormous total of 2,045,300,000 gallons, the department of commerce and labor announced today. The per capita consumption of beer in the United States was only 20.09 gallons in 1910, while in Belgium it is 55.2 gallons, in the United Kingdom 31.44 gallons and in Germany 26.47 gallons. Germany was second in the total consumption of beer and the United Kingdom third. In the consumption of wines France leads with 39.36 gallons per capita, followed by Italy with 31.17 gallons and Portugal with 27.39 gallons. The per capita consumption in the United States is only about two-thirds of a gallon.

In distilled spirits Denmark leads with the consumption of 2.79 gallons per capita; Hungary second with 2.11 gallons and The Netherlands third with 1.84 gallons. The United States per capita consumption is 1.45.

under the safeguard and under the protection of the laws of humanity and the exigencies of the public conscience.

"I therefore beg you to protest in the most energetic manner to the government to which you are accredited for such crimes against humanity committed by the Italians, the sad spectacle, of which offers a striking contrast with the efforts, crowned with success and admitted by the Italians themselves that our authorities in Tripoli and Benghazi have not ceased to display in order to safeguard the lives and property of the Italians as well as other Europeans and that under the very fire of the enemy and in the midst of a justly indignant and over-excited population.

Intervention Asked.

Supplementing this cablegram came another from the Turkish foreign office later in the day, which was also transmitted to the state department. This is regarded as of great importance, because it formally demands intervention by the United States. It reads as follows:

"The Italian atrocities in Tripoli being confirmed officially, and from every quarter, I beg your excellency to reiterate the representations prescribed in the preceding telegram, and to insist upon the necessity of prompt and efficacious intervention in order to put an end immediately to these inhuman proceedings."

The vote has been taken and just canvassed, showing a decisive majority for the proposition, though there was much opposition to it. An assessment of $2.50 will be levied on each member of the organization for the purpose of erecting the home. No decision has been made as to the location.

DR. WILEY MAKES RULE FOR APPLE POMACE

Repressing Not Barred So Long as Water Is Not Added.

Rochester, N. Y., November 5.—Dr. H. W. Wiley, chairman of the board of food and drug inspection, Washington, has written to local manufacturers that the board has decided that there is no objection to repressing apple pomace as many times as desired without addition of water, so long as that pomace does not become heated or decomposed.

"The board has also reached the conclusion," says Dr. Wiley, "that vinegar made from dried apples, chops, skins and cores is not entitled to be called cider vinegar, and that where water is added to cider vinegar, the label must show this fact."

The minister passed the day in the Suffolk county jail awaiting trial for the murder of his former sweetheart, Miss Avis Linnell, the young Hyannis music student.

It was stated today that the prosecution has found in Richeson's rooms a capsule containing a white powder, a portion of which has been sent to the chemical laboratory at Harvard college for analysis.

'DOWN AND OUTER' WILL BE HELPED

Atlanta Responds to Call of the Union Rescue Mission.

Two Large Audiences, at the Baptist Tabernacle and St. Paul's Church, Hear Rescued Men Tell of Their Experiences Before Being Saved.

Two large Atlanta audiences rallied to the support of the "down-and-outer" yesterday, pledging funds which will eventually be used for establishing additional rescue missions.

The two meetings, the first held in the afternoon at the Baptist Tabernacle, and the second in the evening at St. Paul's church, were presided over by C. W. Hatcher, chairman of the Union Rescue mission at 234 Marietta street. Noted speakers traveled from the north for the purpose of taking part. But perhaps the strongest part of the program consisted in the heartfelt experiences of men who had been rescued from the depths of life by these institutions, aptly termed connecting links between down-trodden humanity and the church.

The New Life.

Glorying in their new-found faith, these men related, with striking candor, the terrible degredations which they had suffered, the tenacious hold of the drink habit and their inability to shake loose until a new life had been opened up before them by the simple little mission with its appealing songs and exhortations.

One had been, as he said, "the worst man in Georgia, with the exception of Bill Minor." Another, "born in Miss sippi, where even the babies are taught to play poker," had been dragged down by a lust for gambling until he had lost every shred of self-respect.

"I was so low down," said a third, "that I stole money from my mother, who supported herself by taking in washing, so that I could buy whisky. I made fun of Brother Hatcher and called his mission a monkey show. One night when terribly drunk, I passed the mission and, when a little girl handed me a tract, I cursed her. She shrank back, frightened, and ran into the mission. I followed her inside and sank into a seat. Somehow the songs caught at my heart, and before I left I was another man."

Charley Burge's Jump.

John H. Nicholson, founder of the "Gideons," paid an amusing tribute to C. H. Burge, treasurer of the local mission, in the course of his talk.

"My friend, Charley Burge, is a most energetic talker," said he. "I once saw him jump 3 feet on a platform. Burge came up to the last meeting of the Gideons, determined to secure the next national convention for Atlanta. He was sidetracked and pestered, but he still persisted in his purpose. He finally got up and made a most eloquent speech, ending up with—Well, it was Charley Burge's jump that won the convention for Atlanta."

M. M. Sanderson, prominently connected in the oil business, and president of the New York Gideons, who came here to attend the meeting, told of his experiences with rescue mission work, and of their remarkable efficiency in reaching a class of people with which the church does not come in contact.

"During the course of my career," said he, "I have bucked up against the two worst competitors in the world—Standard Oil and the devil. I don't say that to detract from Standard Oil; but they are on the job every minute, and know how to compete. But the devil—why, the devil has them backed off the map."

Mr. Hatcher explained the work that is being done at the Marietta mission, and hoped that sufficient funds would be forthcoming to make possible the establishment of similar institutions on Peters street and on Decatur street. In the present quarters, meetings are held every night. The aim of the mission is to help the down-and-out with gospel, food, clothing and lodging. That this purpose is being accomplished was shown most strikingly by the testimony offered Sunday.

STRICT PROHIBITION WANTED BY DR. BELK

Pastor Declares That Atlanta Cannot Afford to Tolerate Sale of Whisky.

Charging that Atlanta's reign of lawlessness, to a large extent, was caused by the presence of the whisky king, Rev. S. R. Belk last night delivered a strong prohibition sermon at the Park Street Methodist church.

"Locker clubs, blind tigers and near beer saloons," said Dr. Belk, "are all in the same class. Atlanta will never be a peace-abiding community until liquor is driven from its midst. To get rid of that evil is to place the right men in office!

"In my opinion, the people are parties to the crime in voting for state officials who make laws that legalize the whisky traffic in any form. I have always voted for the prohibition candidate, always will, and will continue to advise voters in that direction. In order to grow the city for which it is destined, Atlanta cannot tolerate whisky, and I don't believe it will. We are now at the crisis—the turning point, and to err would be disastrous. We must have strict prohibition."

Following this, the pastor strongly rebuked all voters who had balloted against prohibition, terming them as serious obstacles to a community that desired to shake off the shackles that impeded its growth.

CALIFORNIA WOMEN FIGHT EQUAL SUFFRAGE

Some of Them Want Reconsideration of the Admendment Adopted.

San Francisco, Cal., November 5.—The Women's Initiative League of California, which plans to bring the question of woman suffrage again before the voters, this time with the women themselves empowered to vote, has opened headquarters here, and will start canvassers out to obtain signatures to a petition asking a reconsideration of the constitutional amendment recently adopted.

Miss K. Croney, president of the league, predicts that equal suffrage will be overwhelmingly defeated if presented again, now that women can vote on the question.

It is the league's purpose to bring the question up at the presidential election next year.

MANY ATTRACTIVE FEATURES FOR SOUTHERN CORN SHOW

Plans are now being made for the entertainment of the many visitors who will come to Atlanta for the Southern Corn Show.

Walter G. Cooper, secretary of the chamber of commerce, who is taking an active part in the arrangements for the exhibition, stated Saturday that the women's clubs of the city had come to the aid of the officials of this enterprise, and would lend a hand in providing for the thousand or more boys from the corn clubs of the state.

Wednesday morning, several members of the show committee will leave for Augusta, where they go to spend a day at the Augusta-Carolina fair. Mr. Cooper states he is confident of securing many valuable exhibits there.

"Pure Food Day" is a feature of the show that is attracting wide interest on that occasion. Dr. Harvey Wiley, the national pure food expert, will visit Atlanta and speak. It is believed that on this day, Judge Harmon, governor of Onio, a democratic presidential possibility, will also be here and deliver a speech.

Many Professors Coming.

Almost the entire faculty of the State College of Agriculture, including that institution's president, Dr. A. M. Soule will visit the show and deliver lectures.

Headed by Mrs. W. Woods White, a committee representing each woman's club in the city, will meet Tuesday to make arrangements for providing homes for the large number of boy contestants who will attend the show.

While here, the thousand boys expected, will be entertained in a royal manner. The visitors will be divided into parties of three, and will occupy homes arranged for them by members of women's clubs.

The biggest event of the show will be the immense parade on the second day. The parade committee, of which Mell R. Wilkinson is chairman, meets to perfect its plans Thursday morning at 11 o'clock in the chamber of commerce rooms.

Headed by King Cotton, monarch of all he surveys, a parade of floats to be a mile long, will traverse the principal streets of the city. It is expected that a thousand boys, and fully that many men, will participate in this event, and it has also been arranged for floats to carry over a hundred Atlanta girls.

Many Boys Coming.

The entrants for the show are coming in rapidly. Saturday word was received from School Commissioner Houseale, of Polk county, to the effect that fifty boys from his district would contest. A large number will be sent from counties in north Georgia.

School Commissioner Milom, of Bartow county, recently notified officials of the show that his county would enter thirty boys, and communications from the seventh congressional district state that several hundred will represent that section in the show.

The judge for the out-of-town exhibits has been seleceted as Dr. Van Natta, of the State College of Agriculture. The judge of state displays has not as yet been selected.

BAUGHTERS OF CONFEDERACY WILL GATHER IN RICHMOND

Richmond, Va., November 5.—Six hundred delegates from thirty-two states of the union are expected to attend the eighteenth annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy which begins a four day meeting here Wednesday. Because of the peculiar interest that attaches to Richmond as the capital of the old Confederacy, the present convention will witness the largest and most distinguished gathering of southern women present on occasion of this kind. Mrs. J. E. B. Stuart, widow of the Confederate cavalry leader, and Mrs. Thomas J. Jackson, widow of the Hero of Bull Run, will be among those in attendance.

The convention will be formally opened Tuesday night at the academy of music with addresses of welcome by Governor Mann, of Virginia; Mayor D. C. Richardson, of Richmond; and high officials of the Virginia division of the Daughters. The response for the delegates will be made by Mrs. Virginia Faulkner McSherry, president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Business sessions will be held twice daily, beginning Wednesday morning until the close of the convention on Saturday. The convention will consider the question of erecting a home for confederate women and of founding a permanent general relief committee. The regular biennial election of the president general will take place at the last business meeting, the minor officers being elected next year.

GREAT WELCOME IS PLANNED FOR 'ROUND STATE TOURISTS

Americus, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—All interest in motoring circles here now centers in the great 'round-the-state tour inaugurated by The Constitution. Besides presenting several entrants in the pageant, Americus will be host to the tourists on the first night out, and a royal welcome awaits them here.

The city will be in gala attire, and Americus motorists, 300 strong, will welcome the cars at a point several miles out of the city and escort them here.

The tourists will find the roads of Sumter in splendid condition, as is the entire highway between Macon and Albany, this length of 120 miles of the Andersonville-Thomasville highway being in superb condition.

Sumter's roads will be dragged and made as smooth as velvet over the course of 28 miles across the county. Many entertaining features for the pleasure of the tourists during their stop here will be arranged by the local committees.

FOUR DAYS BEFORE WEDDING GROOM-TO-BE HANGS HIMSELF

St. Joseph, Mo., November 5.—Four days before he was to have been married to Miss Hazel Hurley, of Hurley, Emery Ball hanged himself last night in a barn.

Three months ago the young man's father gave him $10,000 and told him to make good. Ball invested in apples, a sudden break in the price of which left him almost penniless. In an effort to recover he lost everything he owned including his credit.

Ball walked into the country near Chillocothe, took a pair of overals, tied one end about his neck, the other around a rafter and jumped off a box.

STEAMER CLYDE STRIKES; CRUISER TO THE RESCUE

Vessel Is Ashore on the Northeast Coast of Newfoundland.

North Sydney, N. S., November 5.—The British cruiser Brilliant has been dispatched to the aid of the Reid-Newfoundland company's steamer Clyde, which is reported ashore at the entrance to Little boy, on the northeast coast of New Foundland. According to advices received here, the steamer is in a dangerous position.

The Clyde is a single-screw steel steamer of 439 tons gross, plying between ports on Notre Dame bay. She left Lewisport Friday on her regular weekly trip along the coast, and should have been back in Lewisport in time to start Monday on a southerly trip to Campbellton.

St. Johns, N. F., November 5.—The mail steamer Clyde is on a rock in Little Bay harbor, but it not leaking badly, and efforts are being made to float her. The steamers Dundee and Prospero are standing by, and have taken off her mail and the few passengers she carried.

Whitney Ships Yearlings.

New York, November 4.—(Special.)—Thirty-two yearlings, the pick of Harry Payne Whitney's Brookdale establishment in New Jersey, were shipped on the Atlantic transport steamer Minnewaska to England. That pastmaster of training, James Rowe, selected and prepared the bunch. Competent horsemen predict a brilliant future for the collection, the members of which are eligible to English classics.

John Schlosser, for many years foreman of the Whitney, Haggin and other important stables, had charge of the youngsters, and will assist Trainer Andrew J. Joyner in their preparation for racing at Newmarket.

America's famous sires and matrons are represented in the shipment. Collectively and individually, these juveniles are superior to any ever sent across the ocean before. They are bred to run fast, and to stay. Therefore, it is safe to predict that they will earn laurels next season, and, barring accidents, should prove formidable in their 3-year-old engagements, which include the Derby and Oaks.

Of the thirty-two yearlings, twenty were foaled at the Castleton stud in Kentucky. They are part of the lot purchased by Mr. Whitney from Mr. Keene a few months back.

THREE BODIES TAKEN FROM THE WRECKAGE

Believed That More Victims Are Under Debris of the Bridge.

Auburn, Cal., November 5.—Three bodies have been recovered from the wreckage of the Mountain Quarries Company's bridge across the American river, the east span of which collapsed at 11 o'clock last night.

Five workmen were injured. It is believed still more casualties will be discovered.

The victims were working under the superstructure building caissons when the concrete pillars gave way.

The men caught under the sinking arch were entombed.

The swaying of a lantern, carried by a workman above, gave the men below their only warning of danger. Two workmen, swept into the river, fought their way across. Eight more working at the water's edge were buried in the debris. Some of the men working above were thrown into the river.

Night Foreman J. B. Smith, who was slightly hurt, sent a messenger by horseback to Auburn, 8 miles away. Nurses and physicians were rushed to the scene in automobiles, and four of the injured were removed before daybreak. Several hours later the bodies of the dead were found.

MADERO TAKES HELM OF MEXICA

Conquejor of Diaz Will Begin His Administration Today.

Evidence That Foes of Madero Planned to Start a Counter Revolution Today, But Carelessness of a Conspirator Caused the Plot to Fail.

Mexico City, November 5.—Had it not been for the carelessness of one of the former revolutionery officers in carrying in one of his pockets a copy o fthe "plan of Tacubaya," Francisco I. Madero probably would have been forced to begin his administration tomorrow by opposing the efforts of those who would overturn the government once more.

Evidence was secured by the police and secret service agents reporting to Gustavo Madero, brother of the president-elect, is that today had been determined upon for the inauguration of the "counter revolution." Simultaneously the rebellion was to have been started in Vera Cruz, Oaxacas, Chapas and aong the northern frontier, especially in the state of Tamaulpis.

Emiliano Vasques Gomez, former minister of the interior, according to confessions made by plotters already under arrest, was to have been president of the new revolution succeeded.

Plotters Have Fled.

Among those under arrest there is none of national prominence and few whose names are known well even in this city. Those given most credit for the planning of the new revolt fled during the last few days, but the government authorities appear confident today that the discovery of the plot and the precautionary measures taken have been sufficient to stop the movement, although many fear that only a temporary delay has been affected. What appears certain, however, is that in no part of the republic was the new war begun today.

The discovering of the plans was done by the secret service agents, who have been working for some time on vague bits of evidence unsatisfactory in themselves, but which seemed to point to a conspiracy. What they now regard as confirmation of their suspicions was secured when they found among the papers of a man arrested on a minor charge, a copy of the Tacubaya plan, styled in full "plan of San Luis,' revised in Tacubaya."

Story of Conspiracy.

Since then they profess to have discovered a number of other copies of the same document. The testimony wrung from others arrested, goes far toward confirming the story of the conspiracy and the secret service department claims to have found a number of commissions in the revolutionary army for captains, majors, colonels and even generals, all signed by Emilio Vasquez Gomez.

The reasons given in the Tacubaya plan for a revolution is that Madero has failed to carry out the terms of his "plan of San Luis potosi."

Today throughout the republic the announcement that Madero would be inaugurated tomorrow was made with all formaity. In the capital the governor of the federal district also caused to be posted on street corners a manifesto calling upon the pubic to preserve order in thees days that "the country is in peril."

AMERICAN PRELATES WILL SAIL FOR ROME

New York, November 5.—Formal announcement of the designation of Archbishop John M. Farley as one of three American prelates to be elevated to the cardinalate was made at the services at St. Patrick's Cathedral today.

It also was announced that the cardinal designate will leave for Rome November 14 on the Kron Prinzessin Cecilie. On the same steamer will be Mgr. Falconio, the papal delegate at Washington, who is also to be created a cardinal. Archbishop O'Connell, the other recipient of the red hat, will sail direct from Boston.

In addition to attendance at the consistory of November 27, when the insignia of office will be conferred by the pope with great ceremony, the American prelates will pay visits to the other cardinals, to the rector of the American college, address the students and probably be granted audiences by his holiness.

Archbishop Farley plans to be back in New York by Christmas, and tentative steps are being taken by his parishioners here to tender him a great reception as he returns a prince of the church.

The contract holds until May 1, 1912.

Gomez in Exile.

CYCLONIC GALE SWEEPS BRITAIN

The Coasts Are Strewn With Wreckage—Many Buildings Wrecked.

London, November 5.—Cyclonic gales swept over the British Isles today, doing widespread damage. Shipping particularly suffered. Buildings were unroofed and vessels weer driven from their moorings. The coasts are strewn with wreckage. The channel packet France had an alarming experience. She left Dieppe at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning and reached New Haven four hours later. The packet then got into difficulties. She was unable to enter the harbor and drifted about the channel until nearly 3 o'clock in the afternoon. She was then taken in tow by a steamr which proceeded to New Haven. The vessel was badly damaged. Life belts had been distributed to the passengers.

GREAT LACK OF ENTERPRISE SHOWN BY ITALIAN LEADERS

London, November 5.—A dispatch to The Daily Telegraph from Tripoli by way of Malta, criticises the lack of enterprise in the leadership of the Italians, who with a splendidly equipped force of 24,000 men, ample artillery and a fine hospital and medical service, apparently are doing nothing, the Italian military situation being worse than it was a month ago. As cholera of a malignant type is rife, prudence as well as military initiative, says the correspondent would have suggested the necessity of moving all the troops out upon the clear dry desert instead of which they are cribbed in, in narrow unwholesome limits, with 45 cases of cholera as a daily average.

The Morning Post Malta correspondent learns that many cases of deaths from cholera have occurred among the Italian troops at Tripoli. On Monday last there were 31 deaths; on Tuseday 27; Wednesday 20, with 90 cases in the hospital on Thursday.

The Daily Mirror's Tripoli dispatch dated Sunday says changes have been made in the command of the Italian forces. General Frugones will take supreme command while General Caneva will remain in command of the town of Tripoli. An early advance may be expected.

TURKISH BATTERY OPEN FIRE ON THE WARSHIPS OF ITALIANS

Tripoli, November 5.——A Turkish battery took up a position on the east front of Tripoli today and shelled the warships anchored in the roadstead. At the same time Arabs concealed in the palm groves opened fire on the Italian lines. The latter replied vigorously.

DAMAGE BY FIRE AT HANKOW AMOUNTS TO MANY MILLIONS

Hankow, November 4, via Wu Hu, November 5.—Fire during the last few days has devastated an area 2 miles long and ½ mile wide. It is evident that the imperialists are determined to destroy the city. The total damage by fire amounts to many millions.

Some of the British river boats, including the gunboat Woodcock, were struck by shots during the fighting, but nobody was wounded.

The Rev. Mr. Huntington, of the American Church Mission, entered a strong protest against the execution of Manchu women and children at I. Chang. The revolutionary leaders promised that no more executions of the kind would take place.

SHARP CHANGES IN THE WEATHER

Predicted for the United States During the Present Week.

Washington, November 5.—Pronounced weather changes throughout the United States are predicted by the weather bureau in its forecast for the week, issued tonight, which also announces that western Europe is in the grip of a severe storm.

"The severest storm for years over western Europe and the British Isles," says the bulletin, "was central Sunday morning over northern Scotland, where the barometric pressure was 28.14 inches. It is causing gales and rains over waters adjacent to western Europe, and will undoubtedly result in a considerable loss of lives and shipping in that region. This storm will move eastward over northern Europe the first part of the coming week.

"In the United States the coming week will be one of pronounced weather changes. Disturbances that now cover the Rocky mountains and British Columbia will advance slowly eastward, and be preceded by unsettled weather, local rains and mild temperature the first half of the week in the middle west and the southern and eastern states; rains are also probable Monday and Tuesday in the north Pacific states.

"Following this disturbance, the pressure will rise rapidly, and decidedly colder weather will overspread the northwestern states Tuesday and Wednesday, and advance eastward over the middle west Wednesday and Thursday and the eastern states the latter part of the week. It is probable that this cold change will be attended by snows in the northern states."

TO FIX THE LIABILITY OF THE EMPLOYERS

Workingmen's Compensation Commission to Begin Final Meetings.

Washington, November 5.—The employers' liability and workingmen's compensation commission appointed during the last congress to consider the desirability of a law for the insurance of employees against accident, will begin its final meetings tomorrow. Suggestions will be sought relative to the terms of the bill agreed upon by the commission. Already many representatives of interstate railroads are in the city, and the hearings are expected to continue for several days.

So far, no opposition to the measure outlined has been received, but it is not expected it will pass without material amendment. There has been no effort to fix the amount of compensation to be paid in any given class of injuries, and it is anticipated that when this subject is taken up there will be a sharp clash between the railroads and their employees.

The commission expects to give much attention to the subject before the convening of congress, but it will not sit continually.

ONE MORE BALL GAME BEFORE SEASON CLOSES

Ward and Anson Will Captain Eastern and Western Nines at San Antonio.

Auburn, N. Y., November 5.—The 1911 baseball season is not yet over. Notwithstanding that all major or minor leagues had put away bat and ball until next spring, the national game will be resurrected November 18, with a contest between eastern and western players at San Antonio, Texas. The game will be a feature of the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in San Antonio, and was announced tonight by Secretary John H. Farrell.

T. H. Murname, of Boston, will manage the eastern team, with John M. Ward as captain, and the western nine will be led by Adrian C. Anson, of Chicago, with Morris O'Neill, president of the Western League, as manager. "Home Run" Baker, of the Philadelphia world's champion team, and "Ty" Cobb will be among the players, it is announced.

KNIVES AND ICE PICKS ARE USED BY NEGROES

The warmth and sunshine of yesterday brought out hundreds of people, and as a result the Sunday disorder was considerably increased over the past two weeks. No record was broken for arrests, but there were a number of serious cutting affrays.

An ice pick was the dangerous weapon used by Walt Harden on Will Workman, both negroes, in a fight at Orme and Mills streets. Workman, known to the police as "Blue Steel," was stabbed in the back, the instrument penetrating his lung. He will probably die. No arrests have been made.

Seriously cut in the abdomen and with almost half a dozen other such decorations on his person, Will McGee was taken to the hospital from Marietta and Magnolia streets about 3 o'clock. He had been cut by Son Wright, another negro. They have been living together and McGee will not say anything of the fight. Wright is still at large.

MILITARY TO TEST EXEMPTION LAW

Officers Take Issue With the Attitude of Judge Pendleton.

The desire of Judge John T. Pendleton, of Fulton superior court, to restrict military exemptions from jury service, has created a ripple of excitement in military circles, and the officers who have been recently active in their efforts to establish a full regiment in Atlanta, are expressing much regret that the controversy should have arisen at this time.

One of the active leaders in the movement to increase the military forces by the organization of a regiment, said on yesterday that unless Judge Pendleton should recede from his position, and accord to the militia the full benefit of the exemptions conferred by law as compensation for the burdens assumed by the soldiers, military organizations in Atlanta would receive a backset from which recovery would be difficult.

"The law," said this officer, "seems clear and conclusive in the premises. It is based upon the reasonable theory that military companies are entitled to support by the state government, and that the state receives a direct benefit from the law which enables military organizations to maintain themselves by the accession of paid members in lieu of direct appropriations from the state."

It was stated that pay members are entitled to exemption from jury service as a matter of legal right, independent of judicial discretion, and that regardless of the purpose or date of securing military membership, the pay member could not be legally forced to perform jury service if evidence of his military exemption is brought to the attention of the court before being sworn in as a juror.

A movement is reported to be on foot for concerted action among the various military organizations in Atlanta to secure legal representation to have the status of military exemptions definitely determined, and it is understood that a test case will be brought at an early date.

MORE RAILWAY RULINGS BY THE SUPREME COURT

Expected to Be Made Today. Safety Appliance Laws Involved.

Washington, D. C., November 4.—More decisions by the supreme court of the United States in regard to the extent of the application of the federal safety appliance laws are looked for tomorrow.

When the court took under consideration the "Alabama Safety Appliance Case," in which it decreed last Monday that the safety appliance laws extend to all cars and locomotives on any railroad that was a highway for interstate commerce it also began deliberation of the so-called "Colorado Safety Appliance Case." Many have expressed the belief that a decision in this case will be forthcoming shortly, probably tomorrow.

The decision in the Colorado case is expected to turn on the definition of "interstate commerce" within the meaning of the safety appliance laws. The government is seeking to enforce the law on the Colorado and Northwestern Railway Company, a narrow-guage line, entirely within the borders of Boulder county, Colorado. It is attempting to apply the law in the case of a shipment which went on a way-bill first from Omaha to Boulder, Colo., and subsequently, after a new way-bill was issued onto another point in Coorado.

The government claims, among other things, that unlike laws relating to interstate rates, there is no restriction on interstate commerce to which the safety appliance laws apply. It is urged that in the interstate rate laws the acts were restricted to interstate commerce moving in "continuous passage," while the safety appliance acts apply to interstate shipments that are not in a "continuous passage."

The railroad contends that interstate commerce is the same under the rate laws as under the safety appliance acts, and that the interpretation of what is "interstate commerce" already given in the rate cases must be given in the safety appliance causes.

PISTOL TOTERS GO TO ROCK PILE

No Leniency Will Be Shown Those Convicted Before Judge Hodges.

Macon, Ga., November 5.—(Special.) Persons convicted of carrying concealed weapons in the city court need not expect any leniency. Judge Robert Hodges has declared that the recent prevalency of pistol cases makes it necessary for him to stringently enforce the law, and offenders in his court will receive straight chain-gang sentences, this being, it is believed, the most effective means of breaking up the practice.

Macon, Ga., November 5.—(Special.) The Al Sihah Shriners' Temple of Macon will visit Milledgeville on Wednesday, November 22, for the purpose of initiating fifty members into the order. It is probable that a delegation of over 200 will make the trip to Baldwin county.

Bibb Superior Court.

Macon, Ga., November 5.—(Special.) The November term of the superior court convenes tomorrow morning, and will probably be in session fully two months. The first three weeks will be taken up with civil matters, including over ninety divorce suits. The grand jury will also be in session, and about three weeks will be given to the trial of criminal cases, among which are eight murder cases.

Napier Loses Case.

Macon, Ga., November 5.—(Special.) An unusual case in a justice of the peace court here Saturday afternoon has been the subject of much comment. E. Tris Napier, a prominent Macon real estate man, sued a negro named Jackson for $14.75, alleging that the negro had stolen lumber to that extent from a house on which he was employed. Neither the negro nor his attorney appeared at the trial, but the justice proceeded anyway. The jury heard the one-sided evidence, retired, and in ten minutes returned with a verdict in favor of the absent negro defendant.

CONSERVATORY IS CLOSED, BUILDING TOPPLING OVER

One of the most attractive features of Grant Park, the conservatory, is now closed and has been closed for several weeks, because the building is about to tumble down, and has become dangerous. And all of this because the park commission could not get a small appropriation with which to repair the building. The money was aked for more than a year ago, when the conservatory could have been repaired, but now it is almost too late and the city will either have to go to the expense of building a new conservatory or abolish it altogether. No conservatory will mean no flowers for Atlanta's parks.

Besides the probability that there may be no flowers for the parks next year there is now the certainty that the conservatory is closed to the public and visitors are not allowed to see what has always been considered a very attractive feature of Grant Park.

So the conservatory is closed and on the door is nailed the sign:

"Closed for the want of repairs; dangerous, keep out." And the warning can be seen to be only too true by any casual observer. The conservatory is about to topple over because the inside iron braces are corroded and broken and the outside woodwork rotted. It would not be at all surprising if the building did not fall down this winter.

Within the conservatory are thousands of dollars worth of the finest flowers. Many of these are blooming at this time of the year, prominently the chrysanthemums, and yet nobody is allowed to see the beautiful show. Some one has written the following on the side of the building:

"Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the hot-house air."

PEOPLE PAY HEAVY TOLL THROUGH POLICE COURT

There was one item in the city auditor's report published in Sunday's Constitution which perhaps did not attract as much attention as it should have.

Among the items of the city's annual revenue was the collection from the police court which was put down at $75,887, and this amount will probably reach $76,000.

That means that Atlanta's per capita in police court fines is fifty cents, or the people of Atlanta pay on an average of half a dollar a head for fines in the recorder's court.

It costs the city only $5,227 to run the police court, which leaves a net profit of over $70,000.

Now, if a person should attempt to show what that $76,000 costs the people of Atlanta outside of the fifty cents per head—what the cost will be in trouble, in loss of sleep, in loss of health, in remorse, in humiliation, in broken promises, in grief, of broken-hearted mothers and broken-hearted wives—he will have a problem on hand that all the city auditors in Christendom could not help him solve.

Much of that $76,000 has been wrung from the hand of toiling women who stood true and loyal to erring fathers, husbands, brothers and sons, and the money with which some of those fines have been paid was earned over the midnight lamp, and by some woman who "sang the song of the shirt."

All of the money that has been paid in has gone through one little window, and it is well known to those who have had occasion to visit the police station that the floor in front of that little window has been worn through twice within ten years by human feet.

Some of the $76,000 has been what is called "blood money," that is, it was wrung from the hard hand of people to whom its loss meant poverty and almost starvation, and yet, they had to be made to pay it to uphold the law.

While the 152,000 people of Atlanta are placed in the calculation from which the fifty cents per capita is deduced, there are only some sixteen or seventeen thousand of these who actually pay the fines. So the average paid by each prisoner is something like $50 a year. This includes, of course, the large blind tiger fines.

While the system of fines is recognized as the only remedy in misdemeanor courts, it has been remarked by a very able Atlanta lawyer:

"If John Doe and Richard Roe get into a street fight and John Doe is a millionaire and Richard Roe is a very poor man, one will not be punished at all while the other is severely punished if each is fined $10 in the police court."

There has been a cry raised in Atlanta for fewer arrests and this cry has been raised from time to time for the past decade. There have been spasmodic efforts to reduce the number of arrests and still the cases on the police docket grow and the fines in the police court increase. It seems that as long as there are laws and weak humanity thousands of dollars will go annually into the city treasury through the police court.

FOR SMUGGLING GLASS EYES HE IS HELD BY UNITED STATES

Hoboken, N. J., November 5.—Bruno C. L. Schulze, but on shipboard "Baron Von Schoenewitz," is the name of a man arraigned in the federal court with an alleged confederate charged with smuggling glass eyes into this country. The "baron" was arrested here after the customs authorities had seized as contraband goods, over 12,000 artificial eyes, all of the "human" type, found in his reputed glass-eye "factory" not far from where the German liners dock in this city. With him was arrested Philip Stroh, who conducts a little printing shop, alleged to be the "fence" through which German-made glass eyes reached the Schulze place after they had been smuggled there, it is said, by certain of the employees of the ocean liners.

Schulze's blonde military moustache, attractive blue eyes and soldier-like bearing have made him one of the distinguished figures of the city for many years. He returned from Germany a few days ago on a German liner, on which he posed as Baron Von Schoenwitz. The custom officials say that for years he has been supplying artificial eyes to oculists and opticians all over the country.

REVOLUTION OF EDUCATION HAS TAKEN PLACE IN CHINA

Washington, November 5.—A timely report on education in China has been made to the national bureau of education by Harry Edwin King, vice president of the Pekin university. It reviews exhaustively the modern movement for western methods in education matters, which owes its origin largely to the awakening of the dowager empress after the Boxer rebellion. Commenting on her part in this important change Mr. King says:

"Convinced of the need of instituting reforms, that woman of indomitable will stayed not her hand until she had annihilated the old competitive examinations and established a system of government schools that should be free to poor and rich, male and female, alike. This educational reform was the conception of her nephew emperor, but she it was who possessed the power to carry to completion the greatest revolution in education that the world has ever witnessed. She lived to see it firmly established and to know that the greatest of her people approved the establishment of an educational system that would make possible the carrying out of her promise that the nation should have a constitution, provincial assemblies and a national parliament."

Despite many defects in the very complete system of primary, intermediate, tecnical high schools and colleges and universities, the report states that marvelous progress has been made. It finds that the attempt to make a combined course of study containing all the classical learning of the old literati and all the arts and sciences of the west, has proved a failure, but that suitable courses will be worked out to meet the special needs of the Chinese people.

One defect mentioned is the lack of reverence for teachers.

"The goggle-eyed, stoop-shouldered, subservient student of the past," says the report, "is no longer to be seen. In his place has come the bright-eyed, military-trained lad, who loves athletic sports, is intensely patriotic and is impatient for the day when he shall be prepared to aid in the regeneration of his nation. Such lads are no longer content to be taught by antiquated teachers. The new and the old are out of harmony."

The report announces special advance in female education in China.

MUSIC, A GREATER INFLUENCE FOR GOOD THAN THE PULPIT

At the session of the Saturday Night Club last Saturday evening, the subject, "Resolved, that music is a greater influence for good than pulpit exhortation," was decided in the affirmative. On the negative Messrs. Cole and Logan offered that music and moral earnestness were not necessarily related, citing the brainlessness of song birds as an illustration. The affirmative, debated by Messrs. Clark and Beck, prevailed, upon the ground, that true music-thought in song, as Schiller's words set to Beethoven's music, had the advantage over denominational pulpit utterances of today, as a bond of love between all men of varying creeds and traditions anxious to cease controversy. At the close of the debate, Dr. E. D. Ellenwood, in his address, "The Bible, the Church," moved his hearers when he declared: "I have talked with ministers of our city, who teach the supernatural revelation of the Bible without believing it themselves."

CLEAR AND BRIGHT DAY FOR ATLANTA

Temperature Was Just Right for People Fond of Walking.

Dawning gray and bleak, the sun soon came from behind the clouds Sunday morning and, from that time on until 5 o'clock, the day was as clear and bright as one would want to see.

The day was an ideally beautiful one warm enough to be out of doors th comfort, and just cool enough for light wraps. The snopping district was the mecca of thousands of people, who were attracted by the fall display of millinery in the windows. In the afternoon Peachtree and other residential streets were thronged with pedestrians.

Even Grant park, which has been deserted for some Sundays past, attracted many people. Not a fe walso visited Piedmont park.

There were many visitors from the north in the city Sunday, and one and all expressed themselves as delighted with Atlanta's ideal climate.

BACK IN PRISON AND IN IRONS

Old Bill Minor Goes Back to State Farm Smiling and Smoking a Cigar.

Milledgeville, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—"Old Bill" Minor was safely lodged in the state prison Sunday afternoon.

He was brought to Milledgeville by J. W. Whitten, of St. Claire, the man who captured him, and turned over to the state authorities at the prison farm.

Whitten claims rewards for both Minor and Moore.

There was a large crowd at the station to see the old prisoner. He stepped from the train smiling, smoking a cigar and was quickly carried to a conveyance, where he met Captain Burke, superintendent of the prison farm. A snap shot was taken of him as he sat in the surrey. He was driven to the prison and shackled immediately.

Tom Moore's body was turned over to his brother, who identified it, and was buried at his old home, Keysville, Burke county today.

ACCIDENT TO AIRSHIP EXPLAINED BY VANIMAN

Aeronaut Says That Air Escaped From a Balloonette.

Atlantic City, November 5.—Melvin Vaniman and his airship were especial subjects of interest to the crowds today. Yesterday's mishap, he says, was due to air escaping from one of the compartments of the gas bag known as a balloonette, and making its way into the hydrogen gas compartment, which caused an uneven distribution of gas and air.

For a while the stern was 50 feet higher than the bow. Sand bags were hurriedly shifted, and Vaniman accidentally dropped one on the water-cooling pipe attached to the radiator of the main engine. This necessitated the stopping of an engine, and a quick landing had to be made.

Vaniman then steered for a body of water, and when the balloon struck the bow was submerged in 30 feet of water, while the stern, supported by the gas, was 50 feet in the air. The men on board were rescued by the crew of a dredge.

Vaniman estimates hat he reached an altitude of from 3,000 to 3,500 feet.

Tomorrow he will begin to deflate the balloon and repair the damage to the interior compartments. He hopes the Akron will be ready for further trial trips in two weeks.

Nature's Sun Dial.

(From The London Globe.)

There is no need for clocks on the Aegean sea any day when the sun is shining. There nature has arranged her only timepiece, one that does not vary though the centuries pass. This natural time maker is the largest sun dial in the world. Projecting into the blue water of the sea is a large promontory which lifts its head three thousand feet above the waves. As the sun swings round, the pointed shadow of the mountain just touches one after the other a number of small islands, which are at exact distances apart and act as hour marks on the great dial.

DIVIDENDS PAID POLICY HOLDERS

May Have to Pay Corporation Tax—Question Under Advisement.

Washington, November 5.—The question of levying the corporation tax on the so-called dividends paid policyholders by mutual and other "participating" life insurance companies has been taken under advisement by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Cabell. There is said to be $40,000,000 paid in such dividends yearly, which would yield the government $400,000 in revenue if the corporation tax law were applied.

The government has contended that these dividends represent earnings of the companies, and, as such, come within the provisions of the law. The insurance companies claim they are not profits, but merely refunds to policyholders of overcharges for insurance. It is declared that the premiums on insurance are computed at a rate higher than the cost of the insurance for the sake of safety of the corporations, and these excess amounts are later returned to the policyholders.

Hearings have been held and briefs have been on file with the government on the subject. Mr. Cabell expects to give his decision within a few days.

The same principle is involved in the taxation of fire insurance companies under the corporation tax law. After the life insurance cases are disposed of, Mr. Cabell will undertake to decide that of the fire insurance concerns who also have protested against the government's course.

EXHIBIT FROM SOUTH FINE AD FOR SECTION

New York, November 5.—At the American Land and Irrigation exposition, which opened at Madison Square Garden Friday, there are displays of farm and orchard products from every portion of the United States and from Canada, but none excels the exhibit from the southern states made by the Southern railway system, which has expended several thousand dollars in collecting material for exhibit purposes from all parts of the territory served by its lines.

The Southern railway's booth is 60 feet long, and the arrangement of the exhibit is most tasteful and attractive. There are exhibits of cotton, tobacco, the grains, grasses and forage crops, sugarcane, and all kinds of garden truck and an unusually fine fruit display. The walls are covered by a large map of the south, sheaves of grain and grasses, a score of large colored photographs of typical southern farm, field and orchard views. There are a half dozen tables of the southern apples, which will convince all who see them that the southern apple-growing districts are surpassed by none. Special literature has been prepared for circulation at the exposition, telling of the southeastern states, and especially of their farm lands and products. As a souvenir, there is a beautiful album of twelve views.

Each day an illustrated lecture on the southeast is delivered by M. A. Hays, of the land and industrial department of the Southern railway. For this lecture 150 new colored slides have been made. The lecture covers the industries, the agricultural resources and developments, the scenic attractions, the resort centers of the southeastern states, gives characteristics of southern life and tells about the wide variety of opportunities found in this section. Among the various topics, taken up from day to day are scenes and descriptions of the attractive cities and towns and sections travelers may see in a journey through the Piedmont, mountain and coast districts; where the northern people go in winter to rest and play, the great summer resort regions of the south; farms and farming in the old and new south; where the largest yields of corn are made; the wealth of grasses and forage plants, the alfalfa districts; how the cheapest beef and pork are produced; the building up of the dairy industry; the story of the apple and peach districts from Virginia to Mississippi, why the fruit growers from the north and west are coming south to secure cheap orchard lands; the cotton industry, from the planting to the weaving; what the cotton crop means to the planter and to the south; the great tobacco districts; the boys' corn clubs, and success of northern farmers in the south.

Dr. Cook Coming Home.

Southampton, England, November 5. Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the explorer, was a passenger on the North German Lloyd steamer George Washington, which sailed from here today for New York. Dr. Cook came abroad ostensibly to make a lecture tour, but after speaking at Copenhagen, where he met with a bad reception, he abandoned his original idea.

"Last Saturday, he had a carload of high grade pears on the tracks and the basket brigade came and took them away at 30 cents a bushel, whereas the market price was 60 cents. It came about in this way: A producer in the northern part of Indiana shipped a car of pears to the commission merchant at 25 cents, only to have them refused unless the entire consignment were sold at the flat rate of $100 for the 650 bushels. The producer refused and wrote to the mayor. He took the pears at the producer's price and sold to the consumers for half the market price. They grabbed the pears just as they did the potatoes."

Carried in an unconscious state to his home, Mr. Young remained in a state of coma until late Saturday. He was considerably bruised about the body in the accident.

RELIEVING THE SMALL BORROWER.

Taking hold but little more than four months ago, of the problem of providing opportunity and relief for the small borrower—the man of limited means who needs and is entitled to occasional financial assistance—the Atlanta Loan and Savings Company makes a marvelous showing in the results attained in that brief period of its existence.

The facts, briefly gathered from the interesting report of President W. Woods White, are that this company has put out 472 loans, aggregating $57,633, averaging less than $125 each, securing itself by double indorsement and yet accommodating a worthy class of borrowers at legal interest rates, who could not have secured money from a regular bank because no such bank would accept payment in small weekly installments as this company has arranged to do. It has emancipated more than 400 borrowers from the clutches of usury, saving them over $10,000 a year in interest alone. It has financed the small salaried man and turned him from the thorny path of bankruptcy into the broad highway of business respectability.

Complete evidence of these statements and more may be abundantly found in the company's records; and yet it is not a charitable organization in any except the broad sense that it is doing good. It has proven itself a going business concern, bringing to its stockholders a return equal to or greater than that of the average state or national bank.

The demand of the small borrower who pays in weekly installments, has far surpassed, not the expectations of the company's officials, for they knew the conditions with which they had to cope, but the company's ability to meet it with its limited capital. Its $50,000 has been taken in four months, nor has the demand slackened.

To meet this demand in part at least, and in none but strictly legitimate cases backed by double indorsement affording the maximum safety, the company has determined to double its capital stock, issuing $50,000 additional, and offering it first to present stockholders, and later to the public, at an advance of ten per cent.

Considering the showing the company has made in four months, its splendid earnings and the possibilities before it not only of substantial business success, but of achieving at the same time a great community good in making many better and more self-respecting citizens, there is little question that this stock will be promptly taken, and that it will soon be in great demand.

The Atlanta Loan and Savings Company is a remarkable instance of a successful and profit-making business organization which is at the same time solving a big sociological problem and doing a splendid humanitarian work. There is no question but that it will receive from Atlantans generally the support it so well deserves.

CORROBORATION FROM NEW ENGLAND.

One of the most comprehensive presentations of the south's advantages that has recently come to our notice is from The Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, written in confirmation of The Constitution's declaration that there is no logic on sea or land for the trend of emigration continuing toward the west, when the inducements offered by the south are so patent and rich. So kindly is the comment, so intelligent the analysis of the south's assets and destiny and so valuable the testimony of this detached witness, that The Constitution reproduces the editorial elsewhere in full.

What The Post says about the relative fertility of western and southern lands and the incomparably smaller cost of the latter is only in line with the reiterated contentions of this paper. Our contemporary might have extended its summary to show that in addition to this handicap the south has hundreds of thousands of lands that are yet virgin to the touch of the husbandman, waiting only proper cultural methods to return almost every crop included in the broad range from "blue grass to orange."

The Constitution editorial upon which the comment of The Post is based, has been widely quoted, and attributed much of the superior advancement of the west to the aggressive methods of the western railroads, as against the less enterprising policies of the great southern trunk lines. It is, in reality, "unfathomable" why the tides of settlers should flow round and away from the south when in this section are conditions duplicating those offered by the west, and then exceeding them in scope and variety.

For the price of a ten-acre farm in the middle west, and in portions of the far west, large and fertile tracts can be bought in practically any one of the southern states. Or small tracts can be bought, made to bring forth yields equal to or greater than those of the west, and the remainder salted down in the bank as working capital or expended in improved farm machinery. That is not to consider the equation of climate, to which The Post pays due credit.

While the southern railroads must bear their share for blame in the premises, it is also incumbent upon southern commercial organizations to awake, and broadcast the south's advantages. That plan has been adopted, wholesale, by western communities, and the latter work, as a rule, hand in glove with the vigorous promotion departments of the railroads.

It is significant that from so great a distance as New England should come corroboration of the facts underlying the campaign long waged by The Constitution. The Post speaks from an unbiased standpoint. Its verdict upon the south's opportunities and destiny is final.

YOU CAN WRITE TO SANTA CLAUS.

With Christmas not two months off, the average American youngster will hail with joy the edict of the postoffice department that letters mailed to Santa Claus will not be ruthlessly destroyed or returned to their senders. This had been the first intention of the department, but, following its custom of self-reversal, as in the case of the report of the Chicago vice commission report, it now agrees that Kris Kringle letters will be turned over to such charitable societies or philanthropic individuals as care to receive them.

Enforcement of the original ruling would not have affected the child of the parent in average life, or the infant in the wealthy family. But it would have dealt a heavy blow at the happiness and the innocent delusions of hundreds of thousands of poor children, whose parents are unable to find the trail to the doors of Santa Claus.

This class has, too often, suffered that keenest of miseries—viewing happiness through the eyes of other children. To them the hanging up of the stocking has been a perennial forlorn hope, the tinkle of the reindeer bells a mockery of imagination and of realization thwarted.

Organized charity has sought to reach children in this condition of life by accepting from the postoffice letters addressed to Santa Claus, and answering them to the best of its ability out of the funds at its command. How many little hearts have been made to glow by this kindly strategem, how many blessed hallucinations regarding the good St. Nicholas rekindled, it would be difficult to estimate.

The birthright of the child is joy, and the teaching of the twentieth century is that this inheritance should not be withheld for the simple reason that the little legatee may live in squalid surroundings. Rather is the obligation heavier where poverty sits at the fireside, and the round of the hours is simply a constant revival of the problem of bread and meat.

The proposition has an economic as well as a sentimental significance. For the boy or the girl deprived in youth of those livening influences that reach their climax in the Yule-tide season is apt to make a poor father, an indifferent mother, a joyless and an apathetic citizen.

It is well, therefore, that this year the mails will bear their usual quota of missives directed to Santa Claus, and coming straight from the heart of childhood, in its most trustful and fragrant stage. And the same intelligent charity that has made genial response in the past will again discharge its blessed and intuitive functions.

The Little One.

The Bentztown Bard has been trying his hand at child-verse, and here is a good sample of his latest:

"Little one ever at night he comes,
When the bugles cease and the little drums;
When the trumpets endeth their tura-loo
And the sand man sifts on yours of blue
The golden, magical sands of rest
As you snuggle down on your mother's breast:
Softly, quietly, there on the sill,
Quaintly, tenderly, there on the bed,
He weaves till the dawn comes cool still,
With silver needles and golden thread!"

A Kind Word For the Mule.

"Mules are about the most worthy animals I know anything about," says Editor Howe. "They work hard, and live on half that horses require. I never knew a mule to kick anybody or run away; yet no one even looks at a mule without saying, 'Whoa, there!'"

"What the South Offers."

(From The Worcester (Mass.) Post.)

The Atlanta Constitution very properly uses a double column leading editorial to discuss the continued trend of emigration to the west and Pacific slope, much of which The Constitution contends should be diverted south. This argument of our contemporary undoubtedly has much merit and should have weight.

The Constitution calls attention to the fact that efforts of the emmigration and railroad officials are almost entirely concentrated in sending to western points all of our newer citizens and as many of our older ones as can be induced to go, and mournfully wonders why the south is practically ignored in this movement.

The query is a most pertinent one and is worthy of serious consideration. If those who desire to till the soil for a living and likewise profit cannot be induced to remain in New England, where there are today excellent opportunities in every New England county for profitable farming, by all means let them try it out in the south.

Unimproved land in the middle west, in the northwest and on the Pacific coast is now practically all taken up. In many sections extensive and expensive irrigation is necessary before the land is ready for the plow. In the corn belt the original fertility of the soil is exhausted, and large quantities of fertilizer have now become necessary. Land in the corn and wheat sections is now held at high figures, and it is no longer a poor man's country. On the lower coast at least the necessarily continuous irrigation is now said to be reacting to the injury of many varieties of crops, especially fruits.

As against these conditions the south has much to offer. In some sections, up to a decade ago, the soil was exhausted by drain of years of excessive cotton and tobacco raising but for all other crops it was left and is yet in excellent condition. A moderate use of artificial fertilizers may be necessary here and there to obtain the best results, but since the south has largely taken up diversified farming—and yet not neglecting the two staples—the supposed wornout land has renewed its youth and yielded the most abundant and satisfactory harvests.

The lower coast and gulf states have the perfection of agricultural climate, out of doors work is practicable at least ten months in the year. Not only the staple crops but more especially fruits and vegetables can be produced in abundance and in perfection of growth. The cost of locating there is a fraction as compared with the farther west. The products are very much nearer the eastern markets. For fruit or "truck" farming excellent land can be bought at very reasonable rates, all ready for the plow. Given all these facts, why should all immigration pass by the south on the other side, going further and faring worse.

The Post holds no brief to defend the south. It needs no defense and this article is not of such a character. It does, however, deserve to have the truth told about it, and it is certainly deserving of an amount of agricultural attention which it is now very far from receiving. If you must get out of good old New England, give the sunny southland an opportunity to help you.

TURNING TURTLE CAR HURTS FOUR

Savannah, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—When a Ford automobile skidded, 5 miles out on the White Bluff road tonight, the machine turned over and injured four men, one of them seriously. The car, a rented machine, was wrecked.

The automobile was being driven by a negro chauffer who escaped injury. The car was going at a pretty lively clip when it skidded and turned turtle, burying the occupants under the machine.

J. C. Brinkley, of Georgtown, S. C., was badly cut about the face and head and is injured internally. He is in the Park View sanitarium. C. H. Knight, of Georgetown, was badly bruised and cut and Henry Schroder and Robert Schneider, both of Savannah were slightly hurt.

WOMEN SHOULD BE ALLOWED RIGHT TO BAR IN GEORGIA

There seems to be no downing of the question of whether or not a woman should be allowed to practice law in the state of Georgia. Ever since the last legislature denied to women of this state the right to follow that profession in this state, when Mrs. Minne Anderson Hale brought the question, not only in Georgia, but all over the United States.

Saturday night at the Atlanta Law School Debating Society a debate was held on the question, "Resolved, That women should be allowed to practice law in the state of Georgia." Championing the affirmative was Mrs. Weaver and C. Mortimer Mason, and the negative, J. H. Roberts and Mr. Bidgood. After a hotly contested debate, the decision was in favor of the affirmative; in other words, favoring women being allowed to practice law in Georgia. This decision is peculiarly interesting, in view of the fact that it was from this very law school that Mrs. Hale was graduated, and from which Mrs. Weaver will graduate in June next.

Letters From the People

Liquor in Commerce of State.

Editor Constitution: Prohibition is the absorbing topic of the day, and one of vital interest to the people of Georgia. It is one on which there are many diversities of opinion, and also a great diversity of facts, as to its use, that it is hard to harmonize the people to the consideration of the subject, and more hard feelings have been engendered in its discussion than any other.

There are many parts of the state where prohibition has worked as a great benefit, by keeping liquor from the masses, by which many gradually lost the desire for it. But other sections where it has worked a great hardship on the people and hard to be enforced. Now, the great problem is how to harmonize these interests.

As an article of commerce there is no denying the fact that liquor is as necessary in the commercial world as meat and bread, and all the necessaries of life that go to make trade, or to keep up the commerce of the world; as long as the world lasts wines and liquors will be used and drank and all the laws under the sun cannot stop such use. The shipments to the state of Georgia since prohibition alone amount to millions of dollars per annum. Under prohibition the license is simply diverted. Not one dollar goes into the state treasury, but goes into the pockets of the "blind tigers," while formerly it was the largest amount received of any one revenue brought in from taxation.

Blind tigers are only another form of license, for as long as they are not caught they yield a tremendous income to the animals, and where they are caught what is received out of them in fines goes into the pockets of the solicitors, sheriffs and officers of court—not one dollar to the state. Hundreds of people in Georgia, since the law went into effect, have grown rich and are living quietly and luxuriantly on the proceeds.

For this reason the legislature saw proper to substitute the "near beer" saloons and license the sale of near beer under certain restrictions, hoping thereby not to entirely deplete the state treasury. The taxes brought in from near beer have brought in about half as much revenue to the state as the old licenses from bar rooms.

Bar rooms and saloons, as is well known, are hell holes of vice, and agents of the devil; the idle congregate there, bleed the men who have a little money and make a living by hanging around these places. Those that go there are bought with all sorts of inducements and allurements, free lunches, fine pictures and equipments, gambling contracts effected to meet at some other place, games of chance, and all sorts of schemes to allure them there, ostensibly to buy and drink beer, but really for enjoyment and sport. Watch any near beer saloon in the middle of the day, and the finest and best young men of the city flock there in droves.

Bar rooms, near beer saloons, every place where the idle congregate to drink liquor, should be eliminated from the face of the earth; but the use of liquor and wines should have its place in the commercial world, the same as meat and bread, oats and corn; the sale thereof should be regulated. To effect this all that is necessary is to regulate the sale. High license does not give relief, for it gives a monopoly to the rich, who will make the bar rooms greater places of iniquity than they are now, by having more money invested and more inducements to the people who go there. High license shuts out all who want to handle it in a legitimate manner. Go at it by degrees, educate the people on the evils thereof, let good people set the example to the youth of the country, and they will be sure to follow in the paths of rectitude. Let every merchant that wants to and can give sufficient bond not to be drank on the premises handle it in packages or paying a reasonable license. Have the "pure food law" look after the sale, and see that no poison or vile stuff is injected in it. Wipe out bar rooms and near beer saloons and like places from the face of the earth, and find some place to take the place thereof.

This restriction on the sale, with the laws already in force, will work for good, and there will be no more fighting for a prohibition law that can never be enforced.

The pesent prohibition law has brought about a great evil, which no doubt has been observed by many. It is insidious and affects the people. Many think if blind tigers can be run successfuly they can evade other laws, and more "get rich quick" schemes have developed since prohibition went into effect than ever before. People in all walks of life are now trying to evade other lays to "get rich quick" mail orders, lotteries, loan sharks, everything to catch the unwary are being organized, to get people to invest, and who do invest never to get a return. Every term of the United States courts and also state courts, is filled with cases where someone has devised a scheme to evade the law.

This whole question is a serious one for the people. If a vote is taken in a general election, let it be for or against bar rooms, and devise some way to let liquor take its place in the commerce of the state, instead of going to Chattanooga, Alabama and Florida.

It is with considerable hesitation that I present these views, but it is one that all the people of our state are interested in—vitally interested in. We should get together and consider it, which is the only way to remedy the evils that now exist.

Has a Rare Old Coin.

Editor Constitution: In a recent issue of The Constitution I note that a man has a half dollar bearing date of 1853. I have one of same date. Also 1854, 1855, 1857, 1858 and 1863, 1864, 1844, 1845 and 1847. In quarters I have 1853, 1854, 1857, 1858, 1844. Then a dime dated 1827. All of these have the eagle clutching arrows and leaves and all are well preserved. These coins is one of the legacies my father left me, but am willing now to se llat a fair price. Glad to correspond with parties who really wish to buy, if they will send stamped and self-addressed envelope.

CITY NEWS

His Purse Lifted.—That this season of the year has brought more than the usual number of croks to the city, on their way south for the winter, is shown by the daily reports of "high-class" work being done in the city by thieves who evidently do not live here. The latest one is the loss of a purse and $55 by W. W. Sears, of The Rock, Upson county. He was standing in a crowd boarding a Decatur car at Peachtree street and Edgewood avenue Saturday, when the purse was lifted fro mhis pocket. He suspects two whita men who elbowed him at that time. "Two strange white men" have also figured in several daylight jobs in the residence districts.

PREACHER WANTS BODY OF HIS WIFE EXHUMED

In Order to Prove to Enemies That He Didn't Poison Her.

Paragould, Ark., November 5.—Rev. R. O. Rogers, formerly pastor of the First Christian church of this city, but now of Altus, Okla., arrived here today and demanded that the local authorities exhume the body of his wife. Mrs. Rogers died suddenly in Altus a short time ago and the body was sent here for burial. The minister says that his enemies have circulated rumors that he poisoned his wife, and he demanded that an autopsy be held in order to clear him of the charge.

The local officers say that no charge has been made against the minister, and that they have no authority to exhume the body of his wife.

Inverted Siphons of Los Angeles Aqueduct.

(From Poplar Mechanics Magazine for November.)

In constructing the new waterworks system of Los Angeles, Cal., by which the waters in the Sierra Nevada are to be carried 250 miles southward through the longest aqueduct in the world, some method had to be devised for crossing deep canons and gulches. The Romans overcame these natural obstacles by tier on tier of concrete arches raised to the elevation at which the water was to be carried across, but modern engineering employs steel, and in a number of instances the water will be carried across chasms by means of inverted steel siphons, the outlets of which are slightly lower than the inlets, so that the water will travers the distance by means of gravity.

UNION SERVICE COMES TO CLOSE

Successful Meetings Held by Second Baptist and Central Presbyterian.

A two-weeks' series of revival meetings came to a close in the Central Presbyterian church last night with a powerful sermon by the pastor, Dr. Dunbar Ogden.

He preached on the words of Felix to Paul, "Go thy way for this time." The conscience of the wicked Roman governor had been touched by the power of truth in Paul's great sermon, said Dr. Ogden, and he wanted a relief from the pressure surging within him. And yet he was not willing to put aside the matter finally.

Paul preached to Felix, said Dr. Ogden, not upon doctrinal matters, but went straight to the heart of moral issues. Many men, when pressed by conscience, would rather turn aside into a discussion of the mysteries of the deity. Felix was a great sinner, yet the fire of conscience was not entirely extinct, and Paul's sermon pierced his heart, and he was filled with terror. The tragedy of Felix's life, and the tragedy of lives all about us today, was his postponement when conscience called. Before he met Paul again the baser elements of his nature had prevailed, and his conscience was smothered completely.

The Central congregation and the Second Baptist congregation have been uniting in the revival meetings. On Saturday they worshiped separately in their own churches. Dr. Ogden and Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist church, preached with great power and effectiveness at both the morning and evening services.

"WHY I AM WHAT I AM" SERVICES ARE RESUMED

Dr. George Nussman, pastor of the German Lutheran church, delivered a very interesting address Sunday afternoon at the Universalist church. His address, one of a series in the interdenominational services which are being held at that church, dealt with his reasons for being an evangelical minister. In developing the subject he traced the early history of the Protestant Reformation, giving brief sketches of the principal figures in the movement—Luther, Zwingle and Calvin.

Dr. Nussman's church, which is known as German Evangelical, represents the effort to make a union between the forces of Lutheranism and the German Reformed church, and his address was characterized by the same breadth and catholicity of thought which has been found in other addresses during the interdenominational meeting.

Dr. E. Deen Ellenwood, pastor of the church in which these services are being held, says that the results so far have fully justified all of his hopes and expectations; and have demonstrated that it is possible for brethren differing in theological views to "dwell together in unity."

SUNDAY HUNT COSTS A LIFE

Joseph Murben, a Savannah Youth, Victim of Fatal Accident.

Savannah, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—As the result of a Sunday hunting expedition, Joseph Murken aged 16 years, was fatally wounded today on Romeland's rice planttaion, 2 miles from the city on the Savannah river.

In company with his brother, Frederick, aged 15 years, and Joseph Ryan, 15 years old, young Murken left home last night to spend Sunday hunting doves. The boys were going through a strip of marsh land where they saw a drove of doves. Young Murken had his gun cocked, his companions being some distance behind him. The ground was soft and the boys were picking their way through the marsh.

Murken jumped on a log that sunk in the mud under his weight, throwing him backward. The gun fell, the hammer striking the log, sending the entire load of bird shot into Murken's right side. Fired at close range, before the shot had time to scatter, a great hole was torn in the boy's body.

His companions shouted to a dredge at work in the river and a launch was sent to the strip of marsh land for the boys. Murken almost bled to death before he could be brought to the city, although the government launch made great speed. The boy was hurried to St. Joseph's hospital, where he died during the afternoon.

The Murken family has figured in the limelight considerably within recent months. Several months ago the boy's father shot Dennis McCarthy three times for being attentive to Mrs. Murken. McCarthy was at death's door but finally recovered. After he left the hospital he and Mrs. Murken eloped, later McCarthy being arrested in Baltimore, where he was suspected of being a burglar. It developed that while drunk, he fell into a store and had no idea of burgarizing the place. There is now pending a divorce action brought by Murken against his wife.

To Cure by Radium.

The doors of the Radium institute, which was founded by Lord Iveagh and Sir Ernest Cassel at the suggestion of King Edward VII, have been open to the public since August 14.

Once again England will lead the world, for the institute is more elaborately equipped for its special work and has a larger supply of the essential element, radium, than any other establishment, either in Europe or America. No man of science would dare to prophesy what strange cures and stranger discoveries it may witness. At any rate, radium, the infant revolutionist, is to be given the fullest possible opportunity to upset theories and work miracles.

Seen from Riding House street, which skirts Queen's hall, the institute might be a restaurant or a fashionable dressmaker's. Inside, the restaurant impression persists; marble tiles and wainscoting, luxuriously carpeted stairs, and a noiseless, swift running lift support it.

To right and left of the main corridor are the diagnosis rooms, pleasantly furnished little parlors where the medical superintendent, Hayward Pinch, will ascertain whether or not those who come to the institute are likely to be benefited by radium treatment. Two of the rooms are for paying patients—one fitted with black blinds, so that absolute darkness can be procured at a moments' notice—and two for patients who pay nothing. Throughout the institute the departments are separate, yet hardly distinguishable in the matter of furniture, and the treatment will, of course, be identical in both.

Among many curious things in these rooms, perhaps the most remarkable is the apparatus for making use of the scientific marvel known as Killian's bronchoscopy, by means of which a patient's interior anatomy, or the contents of his stomach may be made visible.

"RELIGION OF THE BODY" DR. HOLDERBY'S SUBJECT

Dr. A. R. Holderby began on Sunday at the Moore Memorial church a series of sermons on "The Religion of the Body" or the "Temple of the Holy Ghost and its Care."

"Jesus Christ has placed a tremendous emphasis upon the value of the human body," he said. "Human life in his estimation is of great value. He came to save the lives of men—to redeem the bodies of men as well as their souls. His mission was to heal the body of disease and to heal the soul of sin.

"He plainly teaches the value of the body and yet he puts the higher value upon the soul.

"Human life is a sacred thing and yet how careless we are of these lives. In all ages of the world human life has been very cheap. The Romans used to kill slaves to feed their fishes. Trajan forced 10,000 prisoners to fight to the death for his own amusement.

"In Colonial times in Virginia absence from church was held to be a crime and for the third offense death was the penalty. If that were the law today there would not be many people left in Atlanta.

"In our own country and in our own time human life is very cheap. There is often a great hue and cry about the sanitary condition in Atlanta by the city authorities, and yet these same authorities are granting license to the sale of intoxicating liquors which are killing more people than the filth and garbage in the city. This anxiety about the sanitary condition of the city is all hypocrisy as long as death-dealing liquors are permitted to be sold. No city is sanitary where intoxicating liquors are sold.

"Drunkenness is killing more people than filthy streets and alleys. And yet the deadly work goes on because the saloon pays a revenue to the city. Money is the price of human life in Atlanta. Temples of the Holy Ghost are being debauched by the dirty, infernal stuff which is being licensed, and this every man in the city council knows full well.

"Many people, especially among the women, are wrecking their health and their lives by insufficient and improper clothing. This is a sin against the temple of God. Human life is being sacrificed to the god of fashion and yet when sickness and death follow, they lay the blame on the Lord."

At the evening service, Dr. Claude Smith, following the sermon of the morning, spoke on "The Preventive and Cure of Tuberculosis."

LITTLE BROWN TEAPOTS ARE PINCHED AS TIGERS

Two little brown tea pots, as demure and proper as ever any perfect lady could desire, were summarily pinched by no less than four detectives yesterday afternoon in Child's Safe, 8 and 10 South Broad street.

Intoxication might have been the charge against the prisoners, for they were certainly "full" of beer, but instead the proprietor of the place, E. Bassie, was arrested and charged with violating the near-beer ordinance. Another Greek was also locked up in connection with the sale of beer on Sunday. Detectives Fain, Norris, Coker and McGill made the arrests.

"While we were waiting," said one of them, "a negro came in and said: 'What about those two bottles of beer?' Then we went in and got the bunch." A white man was used by the detectives to secure a sale of beer by the cafe.

At a viaduct restaurant John Vanscia, an Italian waiter, was locked up charged with doing business without a license. It is said that this place was also furnishing beer to a thirsty public, and has no license to do so.

The two most important tigers captured were W. S. Smith, 321 East Fair street and Mike Akridge, 329 Chestnut street, and Mike Akridge, 329 Chestnut Hollingsworth and Hewell with keeping whiskey on hand for the purpose of sale. A small quantity of liquor and a great quantity of empty bottles was found at Smith's place.

COUNCIL MEETS THIS AFTERNOON

Will Consider Automobile Ordinance and Crematory Site.

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the city general council this afternoon there will be two matters of importance acted upon.

There will be a report from the committee on ordinances and legislation recommending the adoption of an ordinance which will prohibit the parking of auto cars on several of the principal business streets. The ordinance has for its object the relief of traffic congestion in the center of the city, and it seeks to prohibit the parking of cars on the following streets: Whitehall to Mitchell, Peachtree to Porter Place, Edgewood avenue from Peachtree to Pryor, Broad from Alabama to Peachtree, Forsyth from Marietta to Peachtree, Decatur from Peachtree to Butler, Pryor from Mitchell to Peachtree. The ordinance states that no auto car shall be allowed to remain on any of the streets named longer than ten minutes.

The other important matter is a recommendation from the sewer committee and bond commission for the purchase of 250 acres of land near the Intrenchment creek disposal plant with $15,000 of the crematory bond issue. This matter has met with some opposition because members of the board of health do not think any of the crematory money should be used for the purchase of a site.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS SUNDAY ORGAN RECITAL

The usual large Sunday afternoon crowd attended the organ recital at the Auditorium-Armory yesterday afternoon. Dr. Starnes, the organist, was ably assisted by J. W. Marshbank, the well-known tenor, and the concert was greatly enjoyed.

The major part of the organ numbers were by Russian composers, whose music is not very familiar to the Atlanta public. Each number was brilliantly rendered, and several encores were played. Mr. Marshbank's rendition of Allitsen's "The Lord Is My Light," and "L'Aenar," by Bartlett, were splendid.

"PEOPLE ASK ME WHAT I DO"

Mrs. Warwick Does Her Work and Takes Care of Her Three Little Children Without Difficulty.

Kokomo, Ind.—"I had been sick for twelve weeks," says Mrs. Matilda Warwick, of this place," when I commenced to use Cardui. I was almost dead. I could not sit up, and nobody thought I would get well.

I had three of the best doctors in Kokomo, but they did not help me a bit. I was getting worse all the time, when a lady friend of mine told me to try Cardui. My husband got me a bottle of Cardui, and a few doses relieved my trouble.

If it had not been for Cardui, I believe I would have been dead. Now I am feeling well and strong. I can do my housework, and take care of three little children.

People ask me what I do to have such good health, and I tell them I use Cardui. One of my friends is using it now, and is getting along fine. I will never be without Cardui in my house."

Cardui is a vegetable extract, composed of valuable medicinal ingredients, which build up vitality and strengthen the womanly constitution.

During the past 50 years Cardui has helped thousands of weak women to health and strength. If you suffer from any symptoms of womanly trouble, try Cardui. It will surely help you.

M'NAMARA CASE GOES BACKWARD

One of the Eleven Talesman Excused on Account of Illness.

Los Angeles, Cal., November 5.—With more than a collateral interest manifest in developments at Indianapolis relative to the transfer of supposed evidence to the scene of the McNamara trial here, attorneys for both prosecution and defense today prepared to renew the search tomorrow for satisfactory talesmen.

The trial of James B. McNamara, indicted for the loss of nineteen lives in the explosion of The Times building a year ago, hardly has proceeded far enough to warrant any exact forecast of the time when a jury will be sworn in and evidence introduced.

For several months agents of both sides have been employed to work on tangled ends of the case. Activity other than at Indianapolis has cropped out thus far at Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle, and it would not cause surprise here if A. M. Schmidt and David Kalpin, jointly indicted with the McNamaras, but whose whereabouts have been unknown, suddenly turned up when the state begins producing evidence.

The prosecution admits a vital interest in the proceedings at Indianapolis, and the defense, rather expectant that the efforts of the state to secure the so-called evidence will be successful, is preparing to combat it.

Questions to talesmen have become more or less perfunctory, and both sides have come to an automatic understanding of the reach of their examinations.

This accelerates the procedure, and it is predicted that a jury will be sworn in before the end of this month or the middle of December.

Eleven talesmen have been passed for cause, but one, Seaborn Manning, is affected with lung trouble, and it is believed he will be excused tomorrow. A committee of talesmen already passed for cause has presented the situation to Judge Bordwell. With Manning eliminated, it will be necessary to obtain two more talesmen before peremptory challenges are exercised.

Twenty veniremen remain of the panel of forty summoned Saturday, and from this number it is thought the two required will be found and the process moved on a step.

BEER CONFISCATED IN ICE PLANT

Raid by Rome Officers Instituted by Committee of Seventy Citizens.

Rome, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—Last night Sheriff Dunnehoo and Deputy Collier went to the Atlantic Ice and Coal Corporation's plant, at the end of Fourth avenue, and confiscated ten kegs of beer in the cold storage department. Through special Attorney Moses Wright and Solicitor Bale, C. L. Wilkerson, supposed to be acting for a committee of seventy, filed a petition in the superior court alleging that to the best of his knowledge and belief intoxicants were being stored in the plant, and were being illegally sold there. He asked for a search warrant and for an injunction against the alleged violators of the law. Judge Maddox granted the petition and directed the officers to make the search as petitioned.

Sheriff Dunnehoo called on J. W. Hancock, who is manager of the plant, and Mr. Hancock showed him where the beer was. It was confiscated and hauled to the courthouse, where a final disposition will be made.

This, in connection with another raid Saturday afternoon, is supposed to have been the action of the committee of seventy, and is believed to be merely the first of a number of cases about to be instituted. Mr. Hancock states that he had nothing whatever to do with the matter, except that his company had a cold storage plant, where they sold space to individuals or firms to store anything they want to. It is not a public place, and is under lock and key.

Although the petition asked for and the court directed the arrest of unknown person, or persons, in charge of the premises. No arrests were made Saturday. Monday, with the reconvening of the superior court, will likely bring further developments.

Present indications are that the session will continue for four or five days, as there are twelve or fifteen civil cases and fifty-six criminal cases on the docket, besides a number of bankruptcy matters. There are thirty-four matters to go before the grand jury for indictment. Two or three counterfeit cases will be tried.

"THE CONVERSION OF SAUL," DISCUSSED BY DR. FOSTER

Dr. W. O. Foster, pastor of the West End Christian church, preached to a large audience Sunday evening, the theme being "The Conversion of Saul." This was the first of a series of Sunday evening sermons along evangelistic lines. The pastor's remarks were, in part, as follows:

"One of the profoundest questions is that of the Philippian jailer: 'What must I do to be saved?' has been asked at one time by every person who accepts the divinity of Christ. The safest method of approach is to turn to the Scriptures. In Acts of Apostles, the only inspired history of the church, are found several conversions recorded. We shall consider that of Saul.

"Saul was born in Tarsus of Cilicia. His Hebrew name was Saul; his Roman name was Paulus. He studied Latin and Greek in Cilicia, and Hebrew at Jerusalem. He was an earnest student, and advanced in the religious learning of the Jews far beyond those of his age. His Epistle to the Romans is considered by conservative men as one of the deep pieces of philosophical reasoning. His life before his conversion was charcterized by an honest striving after righteousness. He was a legalist, believing that salvation depended upon absolute obedience to the law. He felt the force of the statement of the law that 'cursed is everyone who continueth not in everything that is written the law to do them,' and he endeavored to live a spotless life. Another characteristic of his life was his zeal to convert others to his belief. He wished every Jew to be a legalist, and was very bitter against the followers of Christ who taught that men are saved by Christ.

"In this conversion there is a divine and a human element. Saul was made to feel that it was the sacrifice of Christ that made it possible for him to be forgiven. Christ had not only made an atonement: he had sent the gospel to the world through the apostles.

"While Saul was on his way to Damascus on a mission of persecution, he was blinded by a bright light, and Christ called him into His service. Nothing but a miracle would have turned Saul from his headlong course. With the accounts of the miracles before him, the sinner today has no need for a miracle. Hence the apostle tells us that the miracles would be displaced by the simpler elements of worship.

"The remainder of the story applies to the ordinary conversions of the New Testament. Annanias presented the gospel requirements, and Saul obeyed his voice. He was first convinced of the divinity of Christ. This fact led him to turn from his course of opposition to service to Christ. His retrospect must have been a sad one. The faces of suffering men and women whom he had helped to persecute must have continually come before his vision. When they were tried, he had given his vote against them: and had rejoiced in their death. For three days he fasted and prayed. At this time Annanias came to him and said, 'Brother Saul, the Lord hath sent me unto thee that thou shouldest receive thy sight ard be saved.' His eyes were opened, and he was told to arise and be baptized, calling upon the name of God. He obeyed this command, and was strengthened in body and soul.

"Saul afterwards said to Agrippi that he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, but that he began at once to declare the Christ to those of Damascus and at Jerusalem and throughout the country of the Gentiles. Christ's words concerning the sufferings that Paul would receive were very true to the facts. He was stoned and beaten with rods. He suffered shipwreck, from attacks of wild beasts, from the perfidy of false brethren. He was a man of sorrows and was acquainted with grief. It is believed that he finally became a martyr to the cause that he loved.

"Another striking characteristic of the apostle's life following his conversion was his conviction. The same enthusiasm that had been given to the persecution of Christ was given to magnifying his name. When Pete vacillated about questions of the law, Paul resisted him to the face. He knew whom he had believed and was persuaded that he was able to guard that which he had committed unto him against that day. Again he says that 'neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor principalities, nor powers, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God.' Then this life of simplicity, beauty and duty closed in the spirit of one of his best sayings: 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.'"

SETTLED INCOME FOR WIFE WILL SAVE MANY TROUBLES

Dr. L. O. Bricker delivered the third sermon in his series on "These Human Lives of Ours" at the First Christian church last night. The sermons are attracting audiences which fill the church in every part. The subject for last evening was "Matters of Business," and gave consideration to the things necessary to making a business success of married life.

A part of the sermon follows:

"The marriage service says: 'To have and to hold.' When we have made sure of the 'to have,' the problem of the 'to hold' confronts us. The 'to have' is easy, it is sweet and beautiful and romantic. Falling in love and getting married is the easiest thing in the world. But 'to hold'—there's the rub. And among the problems on the 'to hold' side of marriage, the biggest and most vital is the money problem, financing the domestic partnership, putting the home-firm on a business basis.

"The problem of getting the 'wherewith-all' is a tremendous problem, but it is not nearly so complicated as the matter of spending it. The husband and wife should go into executive session at the earliest possible moment after the wedding day, and work out the problem of a division of the income, settling a definite amount of money and work and responsibility upon each partner.

"The matter of a settled income for the wife is of the utmost importance, for nothing so degrades a grown-up person as to have to keep on asking for little driblets of money. Her having to ask for it is a degredation to the dignity of wifehood, and her asking is an irritation to the husband who thus forces her to do it.

"Such husbands are much like the Irishman who led his wife into the court-room one morning and said to the judge: 'I want a divorce from this woman.' 'What is the matter?' asked the judge. 'Why, she warries the very soul out av me about money. Wan day she asks me for two dollars, the nixt day she wants wan dollar, and the nixt day she demands a dollar and a quarter. It's money, money all av the time.' 'Why, what does she do with all that money?' asked the judge. 'Do with it?' exclaimed Pat. 'Begorra, an yer hanor, Ol've never given her any.'

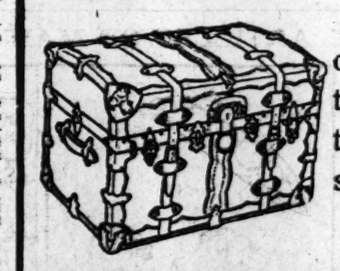

"The minister then gave an interesting description of the financial plans upon which many successful households are run, the substance of all the plans being on the basis of a division of the income between husband and wife, each having certain things to manage and certain bills to pay.

"Other domestic partnerships are run very successfully on the plan of making the wife the treasurer of the home funds, and all expenses are assigned to her management; and the husband, with confidence in his wife's ability is left free to bend all of his energies upon the earning of the funds, knowing that every dollar is being wisely managed; and she, without being bothered with the earning, is left free to study expenses and make every dollar buy a dollar's worth of goods. This plan is in line with human nature.

"Generally speaking, a woman is economical, but not saving; and a man is saving, but not economical. Did you think that these two things are one and the same? They are not. Economy makes money go a long way; saving lands it in the bank. Economy has to do with the question of spending, saving with not spending. In every successful home there must be a saving, a providing for the future. This problem is simply stated, even if it is hard to solve: it means living within your income and saving somethings out of the income. Not saving something out of next year's income, or when you get your 'raise,' but out of your present income. There is not a more surprising experience than the result of a 'raise.' The instant it comes we get the things we have wanted for so long, and then find ourselves wanting something else just as badly, and we overtax our income just as much as before.

"The [illegible] of the home finance committee should decide on the amount to be set aside weekly or monthly, and religiously adhere to it, and make their expenses permit this saving. Those who wisely live within their income will rarely ever have to face the problem of living without one; those who save something for a 'rainy day' will find that it has turned nearly all the rainy days into sunny days. There are two simple guarantees against future poverty and dependence upon others, two great safeguards of the home—a bank book and an insurance policy. These two things are the material defense of the home.

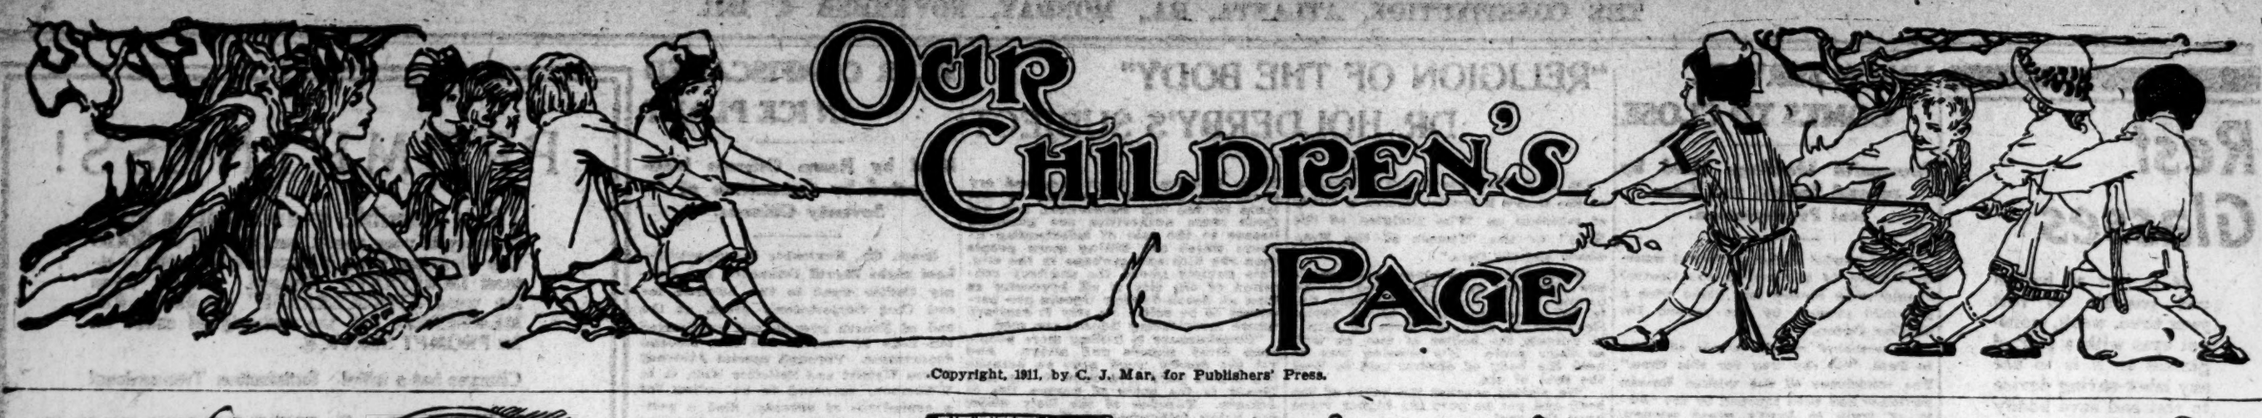

"If a young man marries a girl with good sense, the very best wedding present he can give his bride is an insurance policy. The wedding ring says: 'Love unto death,' but an insurance policy says: 'Love after death. There is much more to this, but the insurance agents are better at telling it than I am, and in the language of Priscilla to John Alden, I would say: 'Speak for yourself, John.'"

Riddles

DO any of you like riddles? Here is one for you written by that famous Frenchman, Voltaire:

What is the longest and yet the shortest thing in the world; the swiftest and the slowest; the most easily divided and the most extended; the least valued and the most regretted; without which nothing can be done; which devours everything, however small, and yet gives life and spirit to all things, however great?

It is not an easy riddle to guess, so I'll tell you the answer before you bother your little heads about it.

It is TIME.

Just think it over; is it not wonderfully true? Time can be long or short; quick or slow; little valued and bitterly regretted. It is the most wonderful thing in our lives, and yet so little thought of by some of us that it is allowed to slip uselessly away.

Now, boys and girls, make the most of your time. Do not waste it! Rightly considered our time is not our own. It is lent to us to fill up to the best possible advantage, and we are accountable for every minute of it.

If you complain of not having time to do this or that, you will be like the old woman who worked all day and grumbled that she was "never done," but forgot to lay the emphasis on the last word. Be systematic and you will have time to do it all, and do it well. Every little bit of time is valuable. So much can be done with a few minutes used to good advantage.

"To everything there is a season and a time to every purpose under the heaven" (Eccles., iii). So, if your time is well spent in school, you will still have some left for your sports and pleasures, made doubly sweet by the knowledge of its having been earned by your own industry.

JAPANESE HOUSES

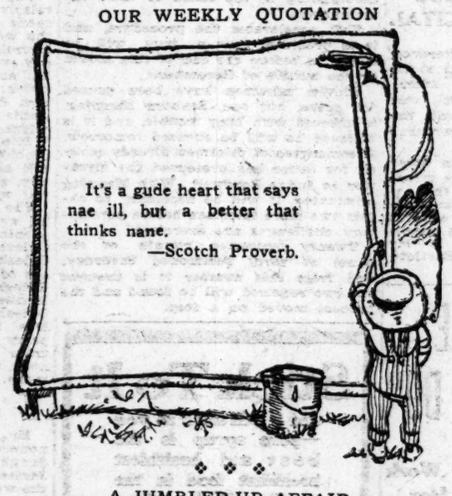

JAPANESE houses are built rather to resist earthquake than to withstand fire. They are exceedingly light bamboo or frame affairs. Instead of strong foundations firmly imbedded into the earth there are flat stones, on which the frame lightly rests at the corners. Such structures will survive earthquake shocks that would crumble to heaps houses more solidly built.

Within the house is simplicity itself. The cottage may contain one or a dozen rooms, at the owner's whim, at any moment when he chooses to let the curtains down. If he wishes to retire he can make his bedroom by drawing down around him, at any spot on the floor that suits his fancy, curtains made of paper. This material is translucent enough to admit light into the impromptu room without destroying its privacy. For a bed all the Japanese needs is a heavy quilt or two.

Within the house everything is immaculately clean. A Japanese will not tolerate a dust-collecting carpet tacked upon his floor. He prefers grass-woven mats, which he can take up and clean every day. Cushions on the floor do duty as chairs, and about the only article of wood furniture in the house is the tiny table where the family drink their tea.

A JUMBLED-UP AFFAIR

THE invitation to such a party should be written in a jumbled-up way, something like this: "Invited are you to a mixed-up party at friend's home your; come mysteries unravel; October, in the afternoon, 15th, 1911." Instead of regular furniture in the room, odd boxes and stools should be helter skelter about the room. A hat containing the following jumbled sentences should be passed around. Each guest takes a paper, and with pencil and blank paper, which is passed, attempts to write out the sentences correctly:

1—"Ssnau ssnihe sseoh nad sskoc; sscko adn sseho esnhi Ssuna: seh sceehat siimnhg ssoeh nad sskoc, orf sshoe nad skocs skoch Ssnau."

2—"Rrtebo Rwoeln llored a ourod lorl rdoun; a ruodn lorl Rrbote Rlowey llored unrod. Hewre rliedo het nourd lorl rrbeto rwloye Hored udron?"

Correct answers:

1—Susan shines shoes and socks; socks and shoes shine Susan. She ceaseth shining shoes and socks, for shoes and socks shock Susan.

2—Robert Rowley rolled a round roll round; a round roll Robert Rowley rolled round. Where rolled the round roll Robert Rowley rolled round?

Next provide numbered slips of paper. Ask all the boys to write a question beginning it with "What would you do if;" the girls to begin "I would." After these questions and answers are completed they are read aloud. This will cause some fun.

Even the bill of fare must be jumbled. Each one may be allowed to select his own "eats," nothing being given him except what he has chosen.

2—Klondyke Nuggets (Sponge cakes).
3—Arctics with punished riches (Ice cream with whipped cream).

A HOME-MADE TELESCOPE

FIRST obtain two lenses, the larger having a long and the smaller a short focus.

A powerful telescope, having a large field of vision, requires a lens at least two inches in diameter, with a focus of from two to three feet for the larger glass, and another lens of from one-half to one inch in diameter, and with a focus of one inch for the smaller end. Having your lenses, the next important step is to make your tubes; this is done by bending a piece of pasteboard three feet long by seven inches wide in the shape of a tube, whose diameter shall be about one-sixteenth of an inch larger than that of your lens. Take a narrow strip of pasteboard and glue it around the inside of the tube, half an inch from the end; put the large lens in its place and press it against the edge of this band. Now take another strip, three-eighths of an inch wide, and paste around the inside between the lens and the end of the tube. By this means the glass is kept in place, it being held by the edges of the pasteboard on either side.

Another and smaller tube, five or six inches in length, and of a size just sufficient to slide easily in the other end of the long tube, should now be made. Around the inside of one end paste a band of pasteboard, as in the larger section, but much nearer the edge. When this is dry paste still another strip inside this one, making a wide edge for the lens to rest against. As this tube is of much greater diameter than the glass, inclose the latter between two disks of cardboard of the same size as the opening in the tube, and each having a round hole cut in its centre for the eye to look through. Cover the inner side with paste and press it against the edges of the strips. Finally, cover the whole thing with some dark-colored paper, pasting it carefully over the surface, and your telescope is completed.

This instrument will present everything in an inverted position, but if the lenses are carefully adjusted objects at a long distance can be very plainly seen, and a boy can derive a great amount of solid comfort, not only while constructing but from its subsequent use.

MADE OF AUTUMN LEAVES

A SOUVENIR book is made of sheets of white water-color paper, five or six inches square, tied with silk. On every page is pasted a leaf or spray of leaves or flowers, each with the name of the place where it was found printed in fancy gold letters. The cover is made by drawing a leaf pattern on the outside, and gilding all the rest of the surface. The white leaves thus left are veined with gold, and a white ribbon band laid across the upper right-hand cover bears in gold the word "Souvenir."

This idea of leaves against a gold ground may be carried out in the manufacture of a bag of white cloth or silk. A leaf design appears against a gold scroll or disk on the front of the bag. Gold-covered ribbons are used for strings. Another bag is made of white and gold linen, the bottom of the bag cut round, and the yellow-colored linen extending up a little way. From this rises a spray of oak leaves, or single leaves scattered over the white, outlined in gold-wash embroidery silk. When necessary, the yellow draw-strings can be removed to wash the bag.

Varnished leaves of red and yellow can be used to cover cigar-boxes, the inside being lined with silk that will harmonize. The boxes can be used for scraps or light fancy-work, or, if a bent handle of thin wood be tacked across and trimmed with ribbons, photographs set on end.

A scrap-basket is made by covering a square shallow fruit-basket with yellow silk, or some less expensive goods, fastening on two handles by making ribbon-wound hoops, and sewing them on opposite sides so they will meet in the centre, and edging the top of the basket with a row of varnished leaves placed to overlap. A spray of the leaves and some red berries fastened on one side of the basket will give a pretty finishing touch to the basket.

A frame for a card photograph is made by taking a piece of water-colored board 5½ by 7 inches, the edges being torn, and pasting a spray of small red leaves, such as come from fine creeping vines, partly around the opening. One piece can be placed at the lower left-hand side, and another, as if it continued behind the picture, at the upper right-hand side. The paper may be torn away for the opening, folded back, and allowed to remain with ragged edges. A cardboard back, with a standard, is put in place last of all.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS

SAID Peter Paul Augustus:
"When I am grown a man,
I'll help my dearest mother,
The very best I can.
I'll wait upon her kindly,
She'll lean upon my arm,
I'll lead her very gently
And keep her safe from harm.
But when I think upon it,
The time will be so long,
Said Peter Paul Augustus,
"Before I'm tall and strong.
I think it would be wiser to be her pride and joy,
By helping her my very best while I'm a little boy."

CONTENTMENT

I WAS standing on a little bridge watching the stream underneath splash and gurgle on its way through the wood. Beyond were a few stepping-stones peeping out of the water, and I overheard their conversation. It ran thus:

"We have a very humble business to do," said one of the stepping-stones as the water washed past it.

"Our heads are above water, however; that's one thing in our favor," said another.

"True," said the first stepping-stone; "there are plenty below us."

"Besides we are very useful in our place, which is as much as the finest bridge over the longest river can say for itself," continued the second.

"It's just as well to be here as there, as far as I can see," chimed in a third.

"Let me tell you," said the fourth stepping-stone, the largest stone of the group, "let me tell you that lots of folks are very glad of our help in crossing the stream and would be very sorry to lose our assistance."

"Hear! hear!" said the stepping-stones. "We are useful, even if we are humble, and our value is not to be despised. I, for one, am content with my position."

"Me, too!" said another.

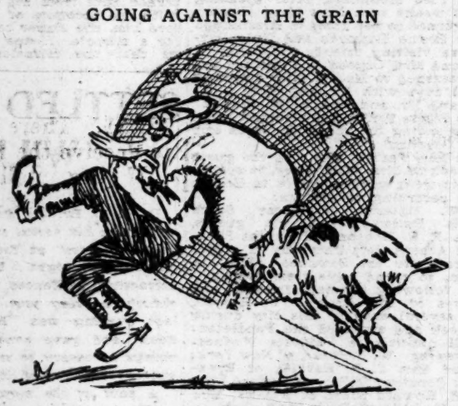

"I would not change with the best of stones," said the third.

And the fourth said something, but the water bubbled so loud at that moment that I couldn't hear.

GOING AGAINST THE GRAIN

Just for Fun

I WISH baby could walk," sighed Sammy, "and then they wouldn't think that all the muddy tracks in the house were mine."

"Are you good at multiplication?" asked Sammy's uncle.

"Only sorta. I always forget whether six times four or four times six is the most."

"How long is that hill where you coast?" asked Sammy's uncle.

"About three seconds down and ten minutes up."

"You must have had a very hard time walking to the drug store against the wind. Your face is quite flushed."

"Yes, it was very hard work walking to the store against the wind, but then it was twice as easy walking home with it; so it was the same thing in the end."

"Sammy, you mustn't mock people when they speak. It's very impolite."

"I didn't mean to be impolite, mamma. I was just playing I was the echo."

"Now, Sammy, if I should take ten apples and put them in the basket, and then take three more, and then five more, and put them in—what would that be?"

"Addition," promptly answered Sammy.

"Well, if I should give May eight apples, and Tom six apples and you two—what would that be?"

"That would not be fair."

Improved Implements and Methods on the Farm

No. 9. Grain Threshing

If one should wish to write a consecutive and complete history of the appliances and machinery used for separating straw and grain of the cereal crops, his first thought would carry him back to the fragmental allusions contained in the Old Testament. Immediately a mental vision would reveal the "threshing floor of the ancients, whereon the silent and tedious tread of heavy animals—horses or oxen—or the more noisy and effective thumping of the flail in the hands of strong men. The writer has never seen animals at work treading out grain, but has no difficulty in recalling the use of the flail for threshing out cowpeas, etc., and this is probably still used on many farms.

When the first power thresher was invented my available records do not show, but probably it was about seventy-five years ago, when the first crude, spike thresher was brought into use and operated by the same ginhouse power that was used for ginning cotton. Of course, such a machine was available only to the larger farmers, who had ginhouses and gins. (Reference here is to the southern section of the country.) Under favorable conditions it required a full day, and often longer, to thresh out and clean up a crop of no more than fifty bushels of wheat. The machine thresher did nothing but knock out the grains. Every bundle had to be separately fed into the thresher, say two or three bundles per minute. The straw was removed by means of a wooden fork and the chaff separated and blown away by means of a fanmill, operated by hand-power.

In 1850 a Mr. Pitts invented and introduced the so-called Tread-Power and Separator, that would thresh out fifty bushels of wheat in a day. It required something less than a dozen men and boys to 'tend the machine and its accompanying hand-power fan-mill.

Then came the "field" thresher, operated first by four to six horses—or more—and doing the work very much more rapidly, but still requiring "all hands" on an ordinary farm to keep it busy. In pretty close order came the steam, or gasoline power, separator—with which all are now familiar, capable of threshing and cleaning up at one continuous operation no less than 500 up to several thousand bushels of wheat per day, and nearly twice as much oats.

So it was not by a single "jump" that the advance was made from the flail to the modern steam-driven machinery for threshing grain, but by a slow but sure development. Now we have in the far west the combined harvester, separator and bagger, driven by twenty to thirty horses, or by steam or gasoline traction engine. The machine is pushed—not pulled—forward, cuts a swath (heads only) of twenty to forty feet in width, threshes and cleans the grain, puts it in sacks and these sacks are dumped off in piles, automatically, just as a binder dumps off its bundles. What a wonderful triumph of invention! May we, after a while, have a machine that will not only thresh and clean the wheat grain, but grind it into flour and sack it ready for market. Who dares say nay?

Of course, every farmer may not find it expedient to buy for his own use only an up-to-date grain separator, but there should be one or more in every large neighborhood. A "traveling" separator may easily serve a dozen or more farmers, threshing and cleaning their wheat, oats and rye for a small toll. A farmer growing fifty or a hundred acres, and upward, of small grain might certainly find it to his interest to own a separator outfit, which would pay its original cost in a few years from neighborhood toll work. In my judgment every bushel of grain (oats) that is fed to stock ought to be clean grain. Feeding oats in the bundle is a wasteful and unsatisfactory method.

If we should consider the relation of each of the developments of farm (and other) machinery and the progress of civilization, it would be impossible, perhaps, to say which has most helped the other. It has been indeed an illustration of action and re-action, each striving more to stimulate and make possible the development of the other. So it is also with the progress and development of the individual farmer. The more he makes use of the discoveries of science and the inventions of art in the field of agriculture, the greater will be his opportunities and facilities for a higher mental, social and civic development.

WHAT TO DO WITH COTTON.

Every summer and fall the problem of what to do, in the matter of marketing of cotton confronts the farmer. Advice is plenty and cheap—"without money and without price." The farmers usually advised not to be in too great a hurry to get their cotton on the market—not to "glut the market" by offering more for sale than the buying side of the market is prepared to take and pay for. They are advised to sell gradually and not to force on the market within three months a crop that requires twelve months to produce. They are advised to borrow money under the guise of getting the aid of banks and money syndicates to "finance the crop."

We ever and anon hear of the expressed willingness of even foreign syndicates (isn't that what they are called) to help the farmers to advance and hold up the price of our great staple. We hear of the scheme to erect storage warehouses all over the country in which farmers may place their cotton and hold it for a "rise," in the meantime pledging their warehouse receipts as security for loans.

Readers of the farms and farmers department will bear witness that I have not indulged in the business of advising the producers of cotton what to do with it when ready for market—or at least when weighed in from field to cotton house—to any great extent. The fact is, the policy of the editor—from which but rare departures have been made—has been, and is, to help the farmer by every means in his power, to run his farm, how to prepare, fertilize, plant, cultivate and harvest his crops of small grain, corn, hay, cattle, hogs, potatoes, peanuts, etc., in such manner that he will have plenty of needful supplies, made at the highest yield rate and lowest cost rate per acre, and some to sell, and to make cotton a surplus crop and at the lowest cost possible—not greater than two-thirds of the probable market price. (For I hold that the margin between cost of production and the market value should be about as 2 is to 3, or as 10 is to 15.)

I do not purpose to criticise those who are foremost and pronounced in advising what to do. Their suggestions and schemes are perhaps all right if they can be reduced to a working plan. I note that the president of the Farmers' Union has fallen back on the old platform—diversification and home supplies. And he is wise to stand firmly thereon, while pushing to fruition schemes and plans for disposing of the crop to the best advantage and the greatest profit. Right around and under this platform is to be found the very fundamentals of success. Many of us have been for "years and years" trying to get the farmer to stand flat-footed on this very bed-rock of success and prosperity—diversification and home supplies. I don't much like this credit business, this borrowing of money, to pay for corn, oats and flour, bacon, lard and hay, mules, horses and cattle products—that ought to be produced at home—on the farm. Farmers—largely because of their segregation—are not co-operative in their habits and methods so far as the conduct of the farms is concerned. They do not readily form combinations. Nor are they "business men" in the usual sense of the words. They are not unneighborly in that they refuse to lend or borrow—a plow or a log chain—a cross-cut saw, or a post-hole auger—or something of that sort—or even, upon occasion, a mule or a wagon. But in many matters—cent-per cent, discounts, acceptances, etc., they are unskilled. A farmer ought to be a cash man—a cash-payer and a cash-receiver.

To come at once to the application, a farmer ought to sell for cash and pay cash for what he buys. He should sell as much as possible and buy only that which is impracticable to produce on his farm. If he manages his farm with reasonable skill and applies to best up-to-date methods, he will generally have produce to sell sufficient to more than pay for all that he is obliged to buy. It is not too much to say that a farmer might, as a general rule, always have on hand money, or marketable produce, to run him at least a year. He should sell what is perishable promptly and hold back that which is practically non-perishable, until the price shall be satisfactory or remunerative.

In a word, the perfect condition of a farmer is that condition in which he may "hold his cotton" at least until the next midsummer, if not for an entire twelve months. To attain such a perfect condition he will produce all the staple supplies in abundance—corn, hay, small grain, bacon and lard, mules, etc. In order to do this he will necessarily plant less cotton, make less cotton and make it at less cost. In producing plenty of bacon, plenty of corn and hay, plenty of beef and butter, and such other things, he will inevitably produce an excess of one or more, if not of each, of these items, and have, in the aggregate, to be sold along throughout the year, enough to pay all expenses of every character, and have his cotton money as clear profit.

Now, careful reader, don't say such a condition cannot be attained and such results secured, until you have faithfully and persistently tried the plan outlined to that end. If you have not tried it, suppose you commence, right now. The argument is to each individual farmer, for each may do it, whether or not the other co-operates. No co-operation is necessary.

LIMING SOILS IN FLORIDA.

"Georgia Boy," Fruitland Park, Fla. Sown three acres prairie land that was so sour in the spring that it would not sprout peas. After applying several loads of crushed limeston and several barrels of builders' lime and working it over several times, I finally succeeded in obtaining a stand. I planted the last time about July 10, had not exceeding one season of rain since they came up. They fruited very light and the plants did not reach a height greater than 14 to 20 inches. I used no fertilizer, and the plants show a yellowish tint. The soil appears to be not only very thirsty, but will not absorb rain or water very readily.

I had hoped to get this plot in condition for truck after January, but I now realize that it would not be practicable. After reading "Sow Oats; Now Is the Time," I write to ask if you think it would pay me.

I have no drill and ask that you kindly give me detailed directions for preparation, planting, fertilising, etc.

I neglected to say that the ground was matted with maiden cane roots. My orange grove of 7½ acres was sown to peas March 1; seed were inoculated. I had an abundant growth of vine, but no fruit to speak of. The seed may have been, and doubtless were, northern grown. I allowed the vines to remain on the ground until they shed most of the leaves, in the meantime a fine crop of crab grass came on and I cut it for hay about October 3. I am advised that to continue planting leguminous crops will cause an over-ammoniated condition, which in turn will cause dieback, or withertip. The leaves are not as rich glossy green or so large as I think they should be, and for that reason, if there be any grounds for a condition to exist as above, I do not consider that I am near the danger line. I do not want to plow in my grove or turn the land—the stubble is standing just as the mower left it. What would you advise? Would hairy vetch and rye suit this climate? The land is high, pine, and of good quality for Florida. To turn the land, fertilize and put in good tillable shape at this time would possibly stimulate the growth, so if you advise planting anything in the grove, please state best method considering.

Answer—I doubt if my conception of what you call "prairie" land—in Florida—is altogether correct. I presume you made a litmus paper test to determine if the soil was sour or acid. A distinctly acid soil may better be treated slaked (air-slaked) lime at the rate of 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per acre, and if the soil be of a mucky character perhaps a larger quantity than one ton would be necessary. Again, a soil that is distinctly acid under normal conditions is likely also to be too wet and require under-drawing. It is not surprising that cowpeas failed to develop a healthful and fruitful crop on a soil that has never been planted on that crop. The yellow cast of the foliage probably indicates two facts, to wit: a deficiency of available nitrogen in the soil and (2) that there were no proper bacterial germs present. These defects should have been corrected by either inoculating the land with two or three bushels of soil from a field known to produce peas successfully or by the addition of stable manure, say three or four tons per acre.

It is probable that the soil in question is defficient in potash. I believe you are wise in concluding to sow in oats.

Of course you would need no precaution against winter-killing of oats so far south as Lake county, Florida. I suggest that you sow the oats (in absence of a grain drill) broadcast and cover with a cut-away harrow or plain disk harrow. Or you may "grill" or rib the land by laying scooter furrows about 12 to 14 inches apart so as to leave each furrow more or less open, or unfilled by the succeeding furrow. Then sow the oat seed and fertilizer broadcast and cover by dragging a brush or plank clod-crusher crosswise the furrows. Of course the land should be thoroughly plowed before laying the furrows as just described. I would use the formula (fertilizer) given in the article "Sow Oats—Now Is the Time," to which you refer, to wit: 200 pounds of 14 per cent (or 175 pounds of 16 per cent), 250 pounds of high-grade cotton meal (or 350 pounds of sea island meal) and 50, probably 75 or 100 pounds of muriate—if you think the soil is especially deficient in potash. Sow 2 to 2½ bushels of oats per acre.

TO DESTROY CABBAGE WORMS.

C. J. Smart, Westville, Fla.—Could you, through the valuable columns of your paper, or perhaps through some of your readers, tell me of an exterminator for the old green collard worm, and, also, the Hessian fly?

Answer—There is no more effective agent for destroying the cabbage (or collard) green caterpillars than paris green. It may be applied in the form of a spray at the rate of 3 ounces of Paris green stirred up in 30 gallons of water; or, better, a mixture of 3 ounces of the Paris green well mixed with 15 pounds of fine, dry air-slaked lime, or cheap flour, sifted on through from a sleazy cheese-cloth bag or a washed and dried flour sack. This should be done while the dew is on, or when the collard leaves are otherwise wet. While it is true that Paris green is a violent poison, there will be no danger of poisoning from eating the collards after a rain has fallen on them, or they may be washed. The application should be repeated after each rain, if necessary. I know of no means of poisoning the Hessian fly that is practicable.

COMPOST.

F. M. Hitchcock, Eva, Ala.—Please send me a recipe for making compost. I have a lot of trash on my place. I would like to know what and how much to use of different stuff to eat it up and pulverize by spring.

Answer—You do not sufficiently indicate what is the character of the "trash" you have. If leaves, vegetable tops, etc., pile them in a loose heap, or in a pen, while wet, and sprinkle successive layers with slaked lime. If slaked lime is not convenient, stratify the trash with thin layers of green (unrotted) stable manure. I usually pile oak leaves in a broad pen and add nothing to them, but simply see that they are wet; but they will not "pulverize" entirely in less than ten or twelve months. But it does not cost anything to wait until they are ready for use.

COTTON IN ARKANSAS.

W. F. Miller, Index, Ark.—I am about done gathering this year's crop, and will soon be preparing for next year. I fertilized my cotton this year with 10—4 acid phosphate and potash, mixing one sack of cotton seed meal with two sacks of the acid and potash for thin land, and using nearly pure 10—4 goods on branch bottom.

I made extra about 200 pounds seed cotton per acre, using 300 pounds fertilizer, costing me $1.12 per 100 pounds. Is this a fair increase?

The land I will plant in cotton seed year is fresh, rich, ridge land, bordering on branch land, timbered with large red, post and white oak; planted in corn in April, and red, ripper peas in May. Peas have totally covered the ground, corn and everything else in the field. I will hog off peas shortly, and turn stalks and peavines under later and disc land thoroughly to cut up stalks and pulverize land, and want to know if you would advise using any ammonia for cotton next year. The land will grow Truitt cotton from 3 to 6 feet high without fertilizer. If I am only to use acid and potash, how will the 10-4 goods do? Cannot get separate ingredients except kainit and 14 per cent, and sometimes 16 per cent acid. How should they be mixed for this land?

Also, will nitrate of soda at $55 or $60 per ton pay to use when cotton is growing, say in July?

And, say, some say that if it rains a hard rain in cotton blooms within six hours from time they open they will not make cotton, while others claim that if there is sufficient nitrogen in the soil, the rain will not afect the blossoms. What is your experience?

There were a good many Mexican boll weevils in the cotton here this fall. What is the extent of their damage liable to be next year?

And had you as soon have Truitt's latest improved cotton among them as any other?

Answer—The mixture you applied to your cotton would have analyzed about: 8.40—1.25—3.50. If the season for cotton in your section was an average one, I think you should have gotten a larger increase from $2.25 worth of fertilizer, say 300 pounds, instead of only 200 pounds of seed cotton.

Your mixture was rather short in nitrogen. I would have used nearly twice as much meal and one-fourth less potash.

Whether to use nitrogen (ammonia) next year on the strong, fresh land, is a question that should be determined by the amount of the other ingredients you will use. If not, more than 200 or 300 pounds, I think you may well omit the nitrogen and the 10—4 acid and potash should be sufficient. If your land does not need nitrogen (has plenty in the soil), there would be no advantage in using nitrate of soda, which supplies only nitrogen. It would probably increase the amount of weed and make the crop later in maturing.

It often pays very well to apply nitrate of soda to cotton—say as late as July 1, but not later, in my judgment and experience, on land that is thin and old and to which sufficient nitrogen was not applied earlier. A heavy rain falling on cotton early in the morning (before 10 o'clock) may wet and even wash away the pollen dust from the flowers before the young boll has been fertilized. Nitrate of soda has nothing to do with that, but it is a result similar to the washing off the boll in sacks from wheat or from corn, etc.

I cannot say about the probable extent of boll weevil damage in your section next year. The variety of cotton you name is prbably not early enough in maturing for a boll weevil section. I would prefer to plant an earlier variety.

FERTILIZERS FOR PEACHES, CORN AND WHEAT.

W. P. Little, Decatur, Ga.—I have just purchased 25 acres of land, 18 miles northeast of Atlanta on Seaboard road, at Tucker, Ga., of which twelve acres is cleared. There are about two acres of very fine seedling peaches, which scarcely ever fail. Had good crop this year. Please state best kind of cotton and corn to plant to get best results. I would like to know what fertilizer to use around trees, as soil seems to be thin, to stimulate them next spring. Please state how and when to apply same and whether whitewashing and deep plowing are beneficial.

2. I also want one acre in wheat. As stable manure is too high to buy, I have purchased bone meal, high grade guano, 10-2-4 per cent. Please state whether to subsoil and how to sow the wheat, in drill or broadcast. How much fertilizer to apply, how and when; also want four acres in corn and two in cotton. State how much fertilizer to use to the acre, how and when to apply.

Above land is very good, made one bale of cotton to acre this year. Outside the orchard the soil is dark and gravelly, gray land, and lies level.

Answer—1. I know of no better varieties of corn and cotton than Marlboro corn and Cleveland's Big Boll cotton. The following formula for mixing a fertilizer for peach trees is recommended:

	Pounds.
Acid phosphate, 14 per cent	1,000
Cotton seed meal, high grade	200
Muriate of potash	280
Total	1,480

This would analyze about 8-0.75-8.00. Apply about five pounds to each tree about first to the middle of February, scattering on the surface at least as far out in every direction as the longest branches extend, or say, describe a circle around each tree about four feet in diameter and one outside of the first about ten or fifteen feet in diameter and scatter the fertilizer between the two circles and plow or dig it in three or four inches deep, or such a matter. Whitewashing the trees is not essential, but may destroy some insects, moss, etc. I would not plow deep enough to tear up the roots, say not more than a few inches.

2. If you can get the use of a regular wheat drill, I would advise its use, always in sowing wheat. A mixture of 200 pounds of acid phosphate (14 per cent), 250 pounds cotton seed meal and 50 pounds muriate of potash per acre would probably give better results on wheat than any mixture of the materials you have secured. I would not subsoil—this late—for wheat. Plow about four or five inches deep and harrow smooth as possible, so that there shall be no clods. Wheat land ought to be prepared a month or two in advance of sowing the seed, so as to give the soil time to settle and become somewhat compact. Put wheat and fertilizer in at same time.

For corn: Three hundred to 500 pounds per acre of the following: Acid phosphate, 1,000 pounds; cotton seed meal, 1,250 pounds; muriate of potash, 50 pounds. List on it two weeks or more before planting. For cotton, 500 to 800 pounds per acre of the following: Acid phosphate, 1,000 pounds (14 per cent), cotton seed meal, 700 pounds; muriate of potash, 75 pounds. List on it two weeks or more before planting.

GUSTAVUS F. ANDERSON IS TAKEN BY DEATH

One of Brunswick's Best Known Citizens Dies After a Short Illness.

Brunswick, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—Gustavus Frielander Anderson, one of the Brunswick's best known citizens, died here today. He was 31 years of age and had been a resident of the city all of his life. He had been ill for several months, having left his office early in May.

Gustave Anderson was the second son of the late William Anderson, one of Brunswick's pioneer citizens and the first to establish a store in the city. During the early part of his life Anderson was connected with his father's business and thirteen years ago, started to work for the Brunswick Light and Water Company, he rose from the position of office boy to cashier, which responsible position he has held for some years and until death.

He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage, was Miss Annie Laurie Southard; his mother, Mrs. William Anderson, three sisters, Mrs. J. R. Barfield of Savannah; Miss Bessie Anderson, and Mrs. S. W. Baker, Jr., of this city, and two brothers, Albert O. and W. Chester Anderson.

The funeral will occur tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the First Methodist church, Rev. W. H. Budd conducting the services.

The pallbearers will be Albert Fending, J. M. Armstrong, A. M. May, J. P. Brooks, J. C. Harvey and G. M. Gown. Thes interment will be in Oak Grove cemetary, in the old family lot. The Elks, of which he was a member, will attend the services at the church in a body and will conduct the services at the grave.

TRADE IN COTTON GOODS STILL CONSERVATIVE

New York, November 5.—Trading in cotton goods is still moving along conservatively. Many of the large mills are now fairly well covered with orders for the balance of the year. Lower prices are an effective stimulant of trade in gray goods, and converters and printers have been entering contracts. Fall River sold 220,000 pieces of cloths during the week, of which 140,000 were for contract delivery. Several of the converters have been placing contracts on specialty cloths and the impression is growing stronger that values are near or at the bottom on many staple numbers.

Jobbers are still out of the market for anything except goods required for immediate distribution, but steadiness of filling, in business, causes the movement of merchandise to assume very unsatisfactory proportions. Less complaint is heard of the volume of business, but the margin of profit is close. In fine and fancy cottons duplicate orders for spring are coming along so slowly that some of the specialty mills are shutting down looms. On the other hand, some of the heavy goods mills are steadily increasing their forward business. Far eastern trade is at a standstill, but miscellaneous buying for export is good.

The resumption of operations by mills as a whole has increased the demand for actual cotton and the persistence of resistance to further cotton declines is causing some buyers to feel that cloth values will not go much lower for a time.

U. D. C. CONVENTION MEETS IN RICHMOND

Richmond, Va., November 5.—Six hundred delegates from thirty-two states are expected to attend the eighteenth annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy which begins a four-day meeting here Wednesday. Because of the peculiar interest that attaches to Richmond as the capital of the old confederacy, the convention will witness the largest and most distinguished gathering of southern women ever present on an occasion of this kind. Mrs. J. E. B. Stuart, widow of the confederate cavalry leader, and Mrs. Thomas J. Jackson, widow of the hero of Bull Run, will be among those in attendance.

The convention will be formally opened Tuesday night at the Academy of Music with addresses of welcome by Governor Mann, of Virginia; Mayor D. C. Richardson, of Richmond, and high officials of the Virginia division of the Daughters.

The response for the delegates will be made by Mrs. Virginia Faulkner McSherry, president-general of the Daughters. The convention will be in session until Saturday. The delegates will consider the questions of erecting a home for confederate women and of founding a permanent general relief committee. The regular biennial election of the president-general will take place at the last business meeting, the minor officers being elected next year.

Trans-Mississippi Congress.

Kansas City Mo., November 5.—With a program of speakers that eclipses all previous ones in the twenty-two years of its existence, the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress will open here November 14 for a four days' session. Judson Harmon and Speaker Champ Clark and Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, will have places on the program. Senator Robert M. LaFollette may be present.

GINNING REPORT WAITED BY TRADE

Figures of Census Bureau Expected to Be Between Nine and Ten Million Bales.

New Orleans, November 5.—The first part of this week in the cotton market promises to be as quiet as last week was chiefly because the trade will be waiting on the report on ginning by the census bureau to November 1. This report will be published at 9 o'clock, New Orleans time, Wednesday morning. Thus far the market has not come to any very decided opinion as to what the figures will be except that they will be somewhere between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 bales, with sentiment favoring the larger rather than the smaller amount.

After the ginners' returns are known the trade will be bound to pay special attention to the November spot demand. By that time there will be plenty of opportunity to find out if it is going to be larger than usual.

November usually is a dead month, but the bulls have claimed much for it this fall, and it is said that freight engagements are large enough to warrant the assertion that exports this month will be big. Apparently confirming this opinion is the rumor that ocean freight will shortly be advanced.

By the first of the week the market will be flooded with reports of what the cold spell of the last week did, but it is hardly probable that these will affect prices to any great extent, although they ought to have a steady influence. The majority of cotton men have come to the conclusion that this crop was altogether too early to be injured seriously by cold weather. At the same time the top crop in the more northern portions of the belt was hit by frost, and reports of this ought to have a sentimental affect.

The Chinese situation will be closely watched, because of the many reports of cancellation of orders of cloths by Chinese importers. These cancellations, it is claimed by the bears, have become an item of importance to many southern mills, as well as to the mills of Lancashire, and it will naturally be claimed that cancellations are on the increase if the rebellion in China grows to larger proportions.

Cables from Shanghai on the week-end said that business in cloths was not good.

The time is fast approaching when the more serious crop estimates will come out. The government estimate is less than a month away, and by the end of this week several important private guesses ought to be published. They may have considerable influence, one way or another, on the course of prices.

Hot Springs, Va., November 5.—After a three days' rest here, President Taft left tonight for Cincinnati, accompanied by Mrs. Taft, Miss Helen Taft and Mrs. Thomas M. Laughlin, of Pittsburg. Secretary Hilles and Major Thomas L. Rhoades, the president's physician, will meet him in Cincinnati tomorrow.

Mr. Taft expects to appear before the election board in Cincinnati and qualify so he can vote at the city and county election the following day. Tuesday he will address the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes and will dine at the Commercial Club.

Leaving Cincinnati Tuesday night, the President begins a thousand mile tour through Kentucky and Tennessee, during which he will make half a dozen speeches. The trip ends at Knoxville, Tenn., November 11 and Mr. Taft should reach Washington early on the morning of the next day.

The president spent today quietly. He attended church this morning and was driven over miles of mountain roads before dinner. The day's programme was by far the most simple mapped out for Mr. Taft in eight weeks.

ADVERTISING TALKS.

heretofore, with very few exceptions, has been in the shape of high-priced reading notices, WITHOUT ANY ADVERTISING MARKS, in reading matter type, in some newspapers.

That kind of advertising has gone out of date. It is not LABELED ADVERTISING, and people do not read it or believe it as they do the STRAIGHT-OUT-FROM-THE-SHOULDER, CLEAN-CUT DISPLAY ADVERTISING.

There is no mistaking a display advertisement in a newspaper. IT IS THERE FOR A BUSINESS PURPOSE. There is no attempt to deceive the reader.

If it is intelligently written, attractively set—IF IT TELLS THE TRUTH—it will have MORE EFFECT than dozens of reading notices, which are usually written with the idea of impressing the reader that the paper is printing it as news, and that the advertiser didn't write it at all.

That kind of advertising does not make a dent in the minds of the modern newspaper readers. It is astonishing how they are able to DISCRIMINATE between a real news item and a "pretender." THE PUBLIC VERY QUICKLY SPOTS PRETENSE!

I'll wager the Otis Elevator advertising, as now being done, HAS ATTRACTED MORE PEOPLE and HAS BEEN MORE THOROUGHLY READ than anything the company has ever put out to the public before.

The Otis Company is a big institution. It is successful. IT HAS SOMETHING TO ADVERTISE. Why shouldn't it advertise and interest the public in escalators by suggestion and argument?

The people usually get what they want. If they want escalators in [illegible] places, they will have them, and public officials will not dare say them nay.

The Otis people are very wise in [illegible] the power of [illegible] OUT-AND-OUT ADVERTISING.

SOME MORE GOOD FOOTBALL COMING

Edited by DICK JEMISON and FUZZY WOODRUFF

BEST TEAM LOST GAME SATURDAY

Dame Fortune Turned Her Back on Jackets.

Tech Has Come With a Rush. Defensively, They Have as Good a Team as There Is in the South--Offensively, They Have Improved Wonderfully.

The best team does not always win. This was the case in the game between Auburn and Tech Saturday. Tech proved to have the better team, but luck, which is the element that has to be figured upon in every contest for athletic prowess, entered into the fray and with the aid of that agent, Donahue's men were returned the victors.

In the final ranking of the teams at the end of the season, we propose to rank the Jackets ahead of Auburn despite the fact that Auburn won the game, though the score in this contest did not prove the best team, unless, of course, Tech falls down woefully in the remaining three games of the season, while Auburn takes a brace.

Eliminating the two long runs by Auburn, the punts of both sides and the returning of punts by both teams, Tech gained five times as much distance on straight football.

In all, from line bucks, end runs and forwrd psses, Tech gained 325 yards, while Auburn totaled but 61. This yardage was divided into 18 first downs for the Jackets and but 3 for Auburn.

On occasions too numerous to mention, with but about three yards to make first down, the Auburnites were forced to kick, while on but three occasions, when they had only that distance, did the Jackets fail, once when the fatal forward pass was tried and another time when a back fumbled the ball. Once only, did the Auburnites hold in the line when the Jackets bucked it.

We venture to remark, that should the two teams meet again in the next two weeks, that barring flukes, the Jackets would be returned easy victors.

Error In Judgment.

An error of judgment, at a critical stage, made the fluke of the Auburnites possible. Captain Patterson, who had all day displayed remarkable judgment in selecting the proper play for gains, called for a forward pass, when the ball was but six yards from the goal. When on end runs and line bucks, he had worked the ball from one end of the field to the other and the Auburn line was crumpling like tissue paper before his attack, this was hardly the proper play.

Even in the center of the field, this play is unsafe, much less, right on his opponent's goal line, but at that, had he gotten away with it, he would have been acclaimed a hero. Despite the criticism he was in a fair measure of success and but one man on the Auburn team, and he a first year substitute, was alive to the play, and he alone made the fluke possible by sailing in front of the pass, which, had he not interscepted it, would have resulted in a touchdown, which at that time would have tied the game and with the subsequent Tech touchdown, would have given the Jackets a victory, which they deserved.

To pick out the Tech stars, placing the majority of the credit upon one man more than upon another, would do an injustice to the others on the team, but it is human nature to place the halo of public acclaim upon the man whose work of ensely stands out boldly in comparison with all the others. The man carrying the ball, naturally draws the center of public attention to him, while his interferers are lost in the shuffle.

To the Tech line from one end to the other, is due a great amount of credit. Their work in holding the oppositon in check made possible the brilliant work of their backfield. In the heat of the immediate aftermath of the game Saturday, one man's work was entirely overlooked, but in thoughtful study two days afterwards, to Leuhrman, the Tech guard, goes a large gob of the praise.

Leuhrman Stars.

Although he was outweighed some twenty pounds by the man opposing him and had directly opposite him Allen and Cogdell, rated with the possible exception of Bonner, the best line men on the Auburn team, his work did not suffer by comparison. In fact, he played rings around them both at all stages.

He carried the ball on two occasions for big gains. On one other, he was the first man down the field under a punt, nailing the runner before he could move, breaking through the center of the opposition to do this. This lad has developed into one of the best linemen in the south.

Tom Bragg, faculty athletic director of Auburn, paid the Jackets a compliment on Saturday night that they well deserved. It was that they had the best backfield Auburn had as yet encountered.

The backfield did play brilliantly. With Patterson acting as interferer for Cook, Goree and Coleman, they were enabled to make large gains time after time. Goree showed a line bucking ability Saturday that even his team mates did not know he possessed, the fact that he was unable to get a start around the ends, bringing out his line bucking proclivities, a case of necessity causing him to cut into the line, when he was boxed around the ends. Bill Coleman also played probably the best game since he has been a Jacket.

Sewanee, Georgia and Clemson are going to have their hands full with that backfield, supported by the splendid line, and taking on the improvement in the remaining weeks that were noted from the Alabama game to the Auburn, Tech will win all three of the games handily.

In closing, we want to get after the rooters. It is up to them to stick and stick hard and fast to the team. Never give up boys. Root for exerything you have got in you and root hard and long. Keep up the spirit. Wind up the season with every one saying that it is the best bunch of rooters that Tech has ever boasted of.

But before we quit, let's don't overlook the man to whom the credit is due for the good team. Coach Heisman took a practically insecure, unsafe eleven at the start of the season, one that was touted as being woefully weak and by his great ability as a tutor built it up until now it ranks on a par with any eleven in the south, basing that comparison on its showing against Auburn.

Two thousand five hundred paid admissions were registered at the game.

Disbrow Buys 200 H. P. Fiat.

Racing circles doubtless will be surprised to learn that Louis A. Disbrow, the well known racing driver, has just purchased for his own use the famous 20-horse power Fiat racer formerly the property of E. W. C. Arnold. This is the car that Nazzaro used to break records at Brooklands, England, and when brought to this country the late Lewis Strang and Ralph De Palma clipped world's marks with it on several courses. It is classed by some experts, including De Palma, to be the fastest car in the world

COBB COMING IN "COLLEGE WIDOW"

The exact date of the banquet to be tendered to Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the sensational Georgian of the Detroit Tigers, has not yet been set, though November 18 has been set as a tentative date by the Atlanta Ad Men's Club, who has the banquet in charge. Cobb is starring with the "College Widow," the musical comedy written by George Ade. Cobb's company is coming to the Atlanta theater on November 23, 24, 25, and it was the plan of the Ad Men's Club to have the banquet on November 18 as an advance advertisement to the show and at the same time bring Cobb here when there is so much doing in the way of sports in Atlanta.

About this time there will be the big Georgia-Tech football game, the biggest game of the season in Atlanta, the aviation meet for the policemen's benefit, the closing of the entries for the Georgia state tour and a lot of other things of less consequence.

It is doubtful, however, if Cobb can be induced to come at that time, as his engagement with the company will probably call for his appearance in other parts of the country, so that the banquet will probably be arranged for some time during the stay of his company in the city.

Lindsay Hopkins, chairman of the entertainment committe of the Ad Men's Club, has the affair in charge and will try to use every possible effort to pull the banquet off on the 18th, as first planned.

Ambitious aviators will soar into the clouds at Speedway meet November 16, 17, 18.

LAMBERT MANAGER OF EMORY TRACK TEAM

By O. O. Meeton.

Emory College, Oxford, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—Herman Lambert, a member of the junior class, who holds the mile and two-mile record for Emory, has been elected manager of the 1912 Emory track team. He has already begun indoor work with the squad in preparation for the spring meets.

A dual meet with Mercer to be held in Macon has already been booked for some time in May. It is possible that the University of Florida may come into this meet and make a three-cornered affair of it. In this case, Savanah will probably be the place to secure the attraction.

As usal, Emory will be especially strong in the distance events. Lambert and Holland are left-overs from last year's squad, who will make things hum in these distance runs. Singleton, Belk and Carlton, all members of last year's squad, will look after the jump events, and Rockwell, Melton, Marshall and Camp will be expected to clean up in the hurdles and dashes.

The quarter-mile track around the ball field is being graded so that the winter rains may pack it by spring, and by this time Emory will have one of the fastest tracks in the state.

BY WAY OF THE PIGSKIN

THE BEST TEAM DOES NOT ALWAYS WIN | A PLEASANT SURPRISE ATONES FOR DEFEAT

BY DICK JEMISON

Saturday's football games were in a measure a surprise, though in some instances the dope ran true to form, an exceptional happening in football, the hardest game in the world to dope out in advance.

The game between Auburn and Tech proved a surprise and at the same time carried down the avenue of straight dope without a veer. The surprise was the showing of the Jackets, who played their heavier opponents off their feet, outgained them five to one and lost through flukes alone. The true dope played straight, Auburn to win by one touchdown, with Tech scoring once, though the old lady, Dame Fortune, spread her protecting wings over Donahue's men in order to make it so.

The Vanderbilt-Georgia battle on Dudley field ran true to all advance dope, practically every one on the "know" side figuring that McGugin's machine had a three touchdown edge on Cunningham's warriors. Vandy tallied twice more, but an offside and an ending of a time allotment on a quarter reversed the count and made them nil.

Sewanee's victory over Tulane was expected, as was Mississippi's over Mercer, but in the latter, Stauffer's machine was hardly expected to run up such a score in view of the showing Mercer made against Georgia on the previous Saturday. Clemson's big win over Citadel, the team that defeated Mercer 5 to 0, was one of the surprises of the day in the south, proving the contention of this column in the past that Dobson is a wizard with a light team.

In the east, Princeton furnished the surprise party of the day by outplaying John Harvard's Crimson warriors. To over-confidence is attributed the Harvard defeat, it being reported that they were betting 2 to 1 on their chances just before the game. Incidentally, the Princeton line outplayed the reputed strong Harvard forwards in every capacity, while Old Nassau's tackling was deadly, Harvard being forced to use many substitutes for the men laid low by the hard tackling Tigers.

Carlisle's defeat of Pennsylvania ran true to form. Yale's big score against New York was a pleasant piece of news to the supporters of the Blue. Williams sprung a large surprise party on Cornell and nearly caught the Ithicans off their balance, all the first string men being brought into play in the last quarter to stave off the Williamstown laddies. Georgetown also proved too strong for the Army, a 0 to 0 tie being the result, while the Army's goal line was constantly in danger.

The surprise in the west was the way the light Syracuse eleven in the first of the inter-sectional scraps kept after Yost's over-confident huskies until they had tied the score and then with a determination born of desperation held the score to a 6-6 count, a moral victory for the New York state eleven.

Running true to form, the splendid Minnesota eleven, which is being touted for the western championship, ran rough shod over the University of Chicago, piling up six more points than in 1910, when they won 24 to 0. The other games in the west followed all the dope in advance of them.

All of which brings us down to the outlook for the games this week, when some more brilliant battles are to be fought. In the south, there are six battles of importance in their immediate section and with a trifle southwide interest. They are:

Vanderbilt vs. Mississippi at Nashville.
Sewanee vs. Tech at Atlanta.
Alabama vs. Tulane at New Orleans.
Mississippi A. and M. vs. L. S. U. at Baton Rouge.
South Carolina vs. North Carolina at Charlottesville.
Georgia vs. Clemson at Augusta.

In these games, there should be interesting football for those who witness it. Of course, local interest will center principally on the Tech-Sewanee game. And here is a game that should be a corker. About even in weight, using entirely opposite tactics, with both teams resorting to the new style game to win, and such backfield brilliancy as will be shown by Meyers, Swain, Goree and Cook, of the fleet-footed type, and Patterson and Gillespie of the line-plunging order, the game should be evenly contested. Tech should have a little edge. However, the result of the contest will furnish some kind of a line on the relative strength of Georgia and Tech, who meet the following Saturday.

The Vanderbilt-Mississippi game at Nashville is another that will prove a hummer. Stauffer's men should give the Commodores the hardest fight of the year. Equally as heavy, if not more so, than McGugin's bunch, "Ole Miss," with their intricate knowledge of the new game, and possessing a brilliant broken field runner and line bucker in Mitchell, and a good drop place kicker and punter in Kahall, will make McGugin turn loose everything he has to bring home a victory. Last season, Vanderbilt won 9 to 0. Both teams are stronger this season, hence, you can look for a close score, with the Commodores probably a one touchdown winner.

At Augusta on Thursday, the annual scrap between Georgia and Clemson will furnish some good dope for future contests, especially for the Georgia-Tech and the Clemson-Tech games. Georgia will outweigh the Tigers, but Dobson, as an exponent of every nature of trick plays, with as speedy a team as Clemson has ever possessed, is sure to make Georgia fully extend herself to win.

The South Carolina-North Carolina game is a battle of as much importance in that section as the Tech-Georgia game is here. North Carolina should win easily. The Alabama-Tulane and the Miss. A. & M.-L. S. U. games should also furnish good battles.

An intersectional scrap that will be waged Saturday will be the Michigan-Cornell game at Ann Arbor. Michigan, although she is rated as having one of the best teams in her history, is lacking something that goes to make it a wonderful machine, and if she could do no better than to tie Vanderbilt and Syracuse on succeeding Saturdays, the Ithicans are going to make Yost's eleven think a thunderbolt has struck them. This is the game of the year for the Ithicans, aside from the Pennsylvania contest, and Michigan will know she has had a battle.

The real strength of the Carlisle Indians will be tested at Cambridge Saturday. They meet Harvard, Coach Warner is said to have the best team in years at Carlisle, while it is doubtful if John Harvard will recover by Saturday from the shock and defeat administered by Princeton. Harvard will be up against the most brilliant combination of backfield men in the East this year, and will have her work cut out, but may be, as Harvard will not enter the game with over-confidence as they did in the Princeton game, the Crimson will be returned victor. Carlisle's status for the season will depend on this game.

The Princeton-Dartmouth game, an annual affair, and the Yale-Brown game another yearly scrap, will furnish good football for those who witness it, with the bigger elevens sure of probable victory.

When the 1911 football season passes into history it will probably be written as the most successful season in the history of the game, with more evenly matched teams than formerly, due to the new game, and a vote of thanks will be due the rule makers as the result.

FULLERTON PSYCHOLOGY TELLS TALE OF TWO TECH GAMES

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

That eminent sporting authority, Hugh S. Fullerton, declares that the break in luck which decides closely-fought baseball games is due to psychological phenomena. If this is true, the faculty at the Georgia School of Technology should throw psychology out of the course of instruction at that institution and compel the student body to burn any text-books which they may have on the subject.

For psychology or some other demon influence has certainly worked havoc with the Yellow Jackets in their last two games of football. In the first of these engagements they were played to a standstill by a team 10 pounds lighter, and none superior in football ability, while in the second game they were beaten by a break in luck and a team that showed far less offensive or defensive or thinking ability than the Jackets, though it had a little edge in weight.

Mr. Fullerton can probably explain it scientifically. Anybody who can think up base-hit grooves ought to be able to explain anything.

Still it is more than likely that the Jackets' mental condition did have something to do with the result of both the Alabama and Auburn games.

In the Alabama game Tech went in with the thought that there was no possibility of its being unable to beat Alabama by a fair score. The shrimpy appearance of the Alabama team, as it appeared on the field, aided this, although the thought may have been entirely subconscious.

Then, when Alabama began playing like a lot of unloosed wildsats, uttering imprecations as the team stood still, and warhoops when the team charged, it took some time for the Jackets to resume their equilibrium.

It took a fairly long time. In fact, it took until the Jackets received another mental jolt for them to be their normal selves.

Tech did not show its real class until Alabama actually appeared like victors. Then Tech showed. But time had flown in the meantime, and the Jackets felt fairly fortunate in getting a tie.

In the Auburn game, Auburn came over with a whoop and hullabaloo of victory, carrying a sign that Tech's goat was in their possession, while displaying the goat, and bearing a coffin for Tech's hopes. Auburn's reputation was a tall one. When the whistle blew, it is entirely likely that Tech suffered a bit from stage fright, and did not recover until the Jackets had to lead a forlorn hope and their real fighting spirit was brought out.

These two lessons have probably helped Tech, and when the next team reaches Ponce de Leon, it will find a seasoned, cool, aggressive and determined opponent. From this angle, Tech looks as good as anything in the south with the exception of Vanderbilt.

But Tech was not the only team that lost through hard luck, and not through lack of football ability. On all accounts, Harvard outplayed Princeton, but was beaten by a fluke and an unquestionably questionable decision. So sentiment was the ruling on Princeton's [illegible] it won.

SEWANEE TIGERS TECH'S NEXT FOE

Cope's Mountain Lads at Ponce Saturday.

Game Will Be Fiercely Fought With Edge a Trifle Tech's. The Back Field Duel Should Prove Most Sensational—Sewanee Has Improved.

Next Saturday the Tech Yellow Jackets have another hard game on their hands when they tackle the Sewanee Tigers, a team that always makes it interesting for the best of them.

Since their defeat at the hands of the University of Georgia, Sewanee

GILLEM.
This is the lad who plays end for the Sewanee Tigers, and whose educated toe will be a factor in the game against Tech Saturday.

has been carefully coached by Coach Cope, until now they are probably a 50 per cent better team and would give the Red and Black all they are looking for. That the Jackets are going to have a fierce fight, goes without saying.

However, if Tech plays the same brand of football against Sewanee that they did against Auburn, Cope's men are not only going to know that they have been in a football game, but they will be lucky if they win.

From all accounts, the Jackets came out of the Auburn game in fairly good shape, barring a few bruises and stiffness incident to the day after a hard game, and will go to work today in preparation for the coming contest.

If the heavy Auburn team could not penetrate the Tech line or circle the ends for any appreciable gain, it is safe to say that the lighter Tigers will not do any better. With an ideal day like the one last Saturday, the game should be a great one to witness.

LOOKOUTS FAVOR SPENCER FOR SCOUTS

Chattanooga, Tenn., November 5.—(Special.)—There was general surprise among Chattanooga fans last week when it was announced that Harry Matthews, former New Orleans and Atlanta catcher, had been deposed as leader of the Albany team and was dickering for the Jacksonville management. The latter job was held by Collis Spencer, a Chattanooga boy, an old Cumberland university star for the latter part of last season, and he brought the team from eighth to fifth place before the close of the season. The fans feel that the local club should be given [illegible] and the club with a team picked by himself. The local colony boasts of three managers—Johnny Dobbs, of Montgomery; Spencer, of Jacksonville, and Harry Salliard, of the Lincoln team, in the Illinois-Missouri league.

Lookouts for Kavanaugh.

Chattanooga, Tenn., November 5.—(Special.)—Opposition on the part of the local club to President W. M. Kavanagh has about been forgotten, and the indications are that the vote of the club will be given to the Southern league executive for reelection. The breeze against the executive locally rose out of umpire troubles last summer and the mistake in the records which took two games out of the Chattanoga won column. President Andrews states that no candidate has been suggested that he would prefer to Judge Kavanagh, and that until such a one is suggested he will cast his vote for that official. The only objections raised to the president here are his residence out of the league circuit and his inability to give a large share of his time to the work.

JORDAN WHICH WILL BE MANAGER? HEMPHILL

The manager of the Atlanta baseball team for the season of 1912 will probably be named today.

If President F. H. Callaway returns from New York today, as expected, the directors will hold a meeting, at which time they will name the manager.

On the inside dope on the matter, Otto Jordan seems to be the man who will be selected for the place, and, if he is, with the policy of putting it straight up to the manager to get results, with full authority in everything and a liberal financial support as the new policy of the company, Jordan will bring a winner here in 1912.

It has been rumored that the reason for Mr. Callaway's visit to New York for the purpose of conferring with Owner Frank Farrell, of the New York Americans, in regard to the possibility of Charley Hemphill, the Yankees' veteran, coming here.

A confirmation or denial of this report cannot be obtained, and whether there is any real truth in the report or not will, of course, hardly be known until the return of Mr. Callaway.

As the New York Americans train here in the spring of 1912, and may want to use Atlanta as their farm, there is a possibility that there is something in the deal after all.

However, Manager Jordan's friends are a unit in declaring that he will be tendered the place again for another season.

COBB LEADS AMERICAN LEAGUE WHILE JOE JACKSON IS SECOND

Chicago, Ill., November 5.—Falling short two points of equalling Lajoie's record of .422, made while a member of the Philadelphia club in 1901, Tyrus Cobb, of Detroit, topped the 1911 American league batters for the fourth consecutive year, with an average of .420, according to official averages announced tonight by President Johnson, of the American league.

Second to Cobb is Joe Jackson, of Cleveland, whose average is .408. Jackson played in 147 games, while Cobb took part in one game less.

Napoleon Lajoie, of Cleveland, who gave Cobb such a close race for batting honors in 1910, has an average of .365. Last year Cobb finished with an average of .385 and Lajoie with .384.

The world's champion Philadelphia club has seven men in the select .300 class, Collins leading with an average of .365. Lapp hit for .353; Baker, the home run hero of the world's series, for .334; Murphy, .329; McInnes, .321; Coombs, .319, and Lord, .310.

Detroit had four men hitting above .300, including Cobb. Crawford is fourth among the league batters with an average of .378, while Delehanty made .339. Gainer has an average of .302.

In team batting, Philadelphia leads with .297, with Detroit second with .291, and Cleveland third with .282

Cobb also got the largest number of runs, scoring 147 times, and made the largest number of hits, 248. Of these, forty-seven were two-base and twenty-four three-base hits.

Cobb's nearest rival in base stealing was Milan, of Washington. He stole 41, while Cobb stole 83.

SANFORD FIELD AND ALUMNI HALL BRIGHTEN UNIVERSITY'S CAMPUS

University of Georgia, Athens, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—The recent additions to the campus of the University of Georgia are the new athletic field, named "Sanford Field," and the new gymnasium which is being built by the alumni and the Peabody fund.

The athletic field has just about been completed this year with the addition of a large grandstand, and is probably one of the best in the south. This field was built by subscriptions from the alumni which were solicited by Prof. S. V. Sanford, physical director of the University, and Hugh Gordon, a member of the board of athletic directors of the University and an enthusiastic alumnus.

Through the untiring efforts of these men enough money was raised from the loyal alumni to cut and grade to a level the side of a hill, put a fence around the field thus made, and put up grandstand and bleachers.

The Clarke county commissioners gave free of charge the convict labor necessary to do the grading and put a good surface on the field. This was a big help to the cause, both in time and money because with the large force of men and teams it was not long before the job was completed.

A 10-foot oak board fence was put around the field and some substantial concrete bleachers erected together with temporary wooden bleachers to do until the grandstand could be built. The two structures served as seating accommodations for the crowds at the baseball games last spring. The grandstand was completed in time for the beginning of the football season and the park will now accommodate as large a crowd as will attend a game in Athens.

More Comfortable.

The high board fence is a big improvement over the flimsy canvas curtains which used to keep outsiders from seeing the games on Herty Field. Spectators are made more comfortable at the new field than they were by the chairs and poor accommodations at the old place.

During the summer a good covering of Bermuda grass grew over the new field and when the candidates for the football team turned out they found it easier on them than falling on the bare ground where they were tried out last year. This will also be a big help in keeping the field in good condition.

The turtle-back diamond directly in front of the grandstand was rather soft last spring for the baseball games but by the time the next season rolls around it will be hard and in good shape. The diamond will be grass-covered this year instead of bare and dusty as it was last ang this feature will be of advantage to the players.

Owing to the loyalty and devotion of Professor Sanford to athletics at the university and the work he has put into them to make them a success, the field was named for him—an honor thoroughly deserved.

Alumni Hall.

The Alumni Hall, as the new gymnasium building is called, has been in the course of construction for more than a year and the work has progressed very slowly due to lack of funds. At the alumni banquet last June about $15,000 was raised and this started the work on again, and the building is progressing nicely. Judge Callaway, of Augusta, is at the head of the movement and Hon. Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution, is also one of the foremost workers.

When completely finished, the cost of the new building with all equipment will amount to about $1,000,000 and will be the finest in the south. It is made of white pressed brick. It will contain the gymnasium, with its full equipment which will do so much to the development of the men who go through the University and is so much missed now; a large swimming pool which will be enjoyed by the students immensely; reading rooms and perhaps training quarters for the athletic teams. It is conveniently located to the new athletic field and this will be an important feature among the faciliti es which this building will provide.

It will probably be another year before the alumni hall will be completed, but when it is the University of Georgia will have in it the finest opportunity for developing the young men attending it of any institution in the south, and something which has been so sadly lacking for the past many years.

With these improvements, the physical development of the students will be greatly aided and the attractiveness of the university campus materially increased.

Whenever Peace Gets New Job He Moves.

New York, November 5.—Nathaniel Peace, a carpenter, carries with him his home, a toolhouse, wherever he goes, and today his manner of living nearly brought him into court on a charge of illegal registration.

Peace registered from No. 640 Fifth avenue, the home of H. C. Frick, the steel millionaire. A policeman investigated and found Peace living in a very small toolhouse in front of Frick's home, upon which some repair work was being done.

"I live in this toolhouse," said Peace. "I take it with me on every job I get."

The policeman asked a magistrate for a warrant for Peace's arrest, but when told of the circumstances, held that the carpenter's registration was quite legal.

Falconio at a Banquet.

Washington, November 5.—Cardinal Designate Falconio, who will shortly relinquish his post as apostolic delegate here to return to Rome, at a banquet given in his honor tonight by the faculty of Georgetown university, said he had become so impressed with the provisions made for the education of all classes in America that he intended to make the matter the subject of a special report to the pope.

CHEWING GUM FOR THE ENGLISH

London, November 5.—Chewing gum, long regarded as a distinctly American habit, will soon be almost universal throughout the length and breadth of the British Isles if the fond hope of a band of American promoters, who have begun operations in this city, is fulfilled. Tired of the refusal of the English people to buy American chewing gum these promoters have arrived in town determined to force it down British throats, figuratively speaking.

Offices have already been rented in the Strand, and one of the largest manufacturers of chewing gum in the United States is in charge of operations. His name is associated with a particular flavor of gum, which became immensely popular in America a few years ago. His intention is to form a stock company, with a capital of $750,000, for the manufacture and sale of gum in this country.

The manufacturer has already succeeded in interesting one of the largest and richest of London druggists, who has branch stores all over town. This druggist has already gone in for American soda water, installing expensive plants and catering for the American trade in the summer and fall months. Outside of one big dry goods stores, his stores are the only places where it is possible to get a really satisfactory American soda in London, and some of his shops, especially one in the Strand, did flourishing businesses last summer. This success has undoubtedly made him ripe for the chewing gum man, and he has agreed to act as a sort of distributing center for supplying druggists throughout the United Kingdom, as well as to find some of the money for the manufacturing plant.

To those who know the English this attempt to introduce the delights of gum chewing among them has many humorous elements. Tryan Englishman with a piece of gum, and, after rolling it about in his mouth, he invariably swallows it. He knows nothing about its uses and apparently is dead to all its virtues.

"Do you think chewing gum will ever have a large sale in England?" I asked a well-informed Englishman the other day.

"No," he replied, after giving the matter profound thought. "Foo is too cheap."

A great many people in this country hold that the chewing gum habit is largely responsible for the American twang; that in order to retain the gum in the mouth and talk at the same time one must twist tongue, lips and throat in such a way that a twang is unavoidable. If that is true, and gum chewing becomes a widespread habit in this country, we can look forward to a cross between Cockney and Bowery that will be a delight. Undoubtedly it will bring the two countries closer together in spirit, and hasten the day when arbitration treaties are not only possible of ratification, but are unnecessary.

ENGLISH ROMEO; SIAMESE JULIET

Vajiravudli's coronation, which is about to take place amid gorgeous scenes "of more than Oriental splendor" as Kipling has it, recalls a romantic tragedy which happend here a few years ago, the actors therein being a young Englishman, big, fair and handsome, and a little Siamese princess, first cousin to his majesty, small, lovely and dark.

William Anderson—this isn't his name, but it will do—the Englishman had come to Siam some years previously to take up a minor appointment in one of the big schools which had been built in different parts of the country by the late King Shulalongkorn, an eastern monarch of enlightened ideas, who, having spent some time in Europe, was quite alive to the advantages of education. In a short time, he rose from his original position to that of adviser to the minister of education and this obliged him to live in the capital.

When he came to Bangkok he had a small bungalow assigned to him in the gardens of one of the royal palaces, on the banks of the river. In the big palace near his modest dwelling lived a Siamese princess, a sister of the late king, and her daughter, a lovely, dainty little maid of 17, with the clear olive complexion, soft dark eyes and delicate rose-colored cheeks so often seen among young Mongolian women. Anderson, being in high favor at court, soon became acquainted with the princess and her pretty daughter, an acquaintance that, under the eastern sky, soon ripened into love. He used to take his "Princess Rosebud" as he called her, on the river in the evenings in a skiff, with her mother for chaperone.

Of course no princess of the blood colud marry without the king's consent, and Chaulalongkorn—reluctantly, it is true, for the clever Englishman was a great favorite of his—said "No." All Anderson's entreaties were in vain, and what was worse, the next day, Princess Rosebud and her mother disappeared from the big palace, leaving no trace of their wherabouts.

Anderson was inconsolable, and plunged into his work with more fervor than ever. In a huge effort to put his pretty little princess out of his mind. This combined with an unusually trying hot season, laid him open ton an attack of typhoid fever. One night, when the disease was at its worst, two muffled figures stole down to the bungalow. Princess Roebud, who, though seevral days' journey distant, had somehow kept herself informed of her lover's doings. When she heard he was ill, she escaped from her mother's care and attended by one of her women, made her way after many hardships and difficulties back to the capital. She established herself as Anderson's nurse, and such was her devoted care that in a little while he recovered. They spent many blissful hours together during his convalescence, but their happiness was short-lived. The little princess sickened of the same terrible fever, and in spite of every attention, died in her lover's arms.

Soon after his little Rosebud's funeral Anderson applied for leave and went to England, all the associations of his bungalow being to poignant until the sharpness of his grief had worn off. He then returned to Bankkok and continued his work, and is now heer, and well known. That is why his real name must not be given, for few here know the story.

At the THEATRES

"Excuse Me."
(At the Atlanta.)

Henry W. Savage's first offering of the season will be Rupert Hughes' episodical farce, entitled "Excuse Me," which will be the attraction at the Atlanta tomorrow and Wednesday for three performances. This is one of the most pretentious of Mr. Savage's productions. Thirty-one characters are employed in the action of the play, which is in three acts. Mr. Savage has given a great deal of attention to the scenic details, and has assembled a company of merit.

Mr. Hughes, in "Excuse Me," has hit upon a novel idea in the matter of locale—all the scenes being in the interior of a vestibule train, and the action describes a trans-continental journey, starting from Chicago, with stop-overs at Ogden, Utah, and Reno, Nev. An amusing love story is unfolded during the progress of the journey. In addition to this, there are plots and counter plots, and their action involves a series of rollicking episodes throughout the three scenes. Seats are now selling.

"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."
(At the Atlanta.)

Judging from the mail and phone orders that have been pouring into the box office of the Atlanta theater since the coming of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" was announced, there will doubtless be a record-breaking crowd in line this morning when the seats for this attraction are placed on sale. The engagement is for three nights and Saturday matinee, beginning next Thursday evening. It seems as if everyone has heard of the wonderful success of this George M. Cohan comedy, with its record of two seasons in New York and a year in Chicago. The latter engagement has recently ended, and the entire company and production which have delighted the play-goers of that city will come here for the local engagement.

"The Chorus Lady."
(At the Grand.)

The entire dramatic profession stood aghast when James Forbes selected the charter of a chorus girl as the central figure of his comedy, "The Chorus Lady," which comes to the Grand Saturday matinee and nights. The play, however, has proved to be the biggest comedy success of the century and has been an international triumph, having enjoyed a run of six months in London. Life behind the scenes is something that the general public knows almost nothing about and it is for this reason perhaps that the dressing room scene shown in the second act of the play has become the most talked-of scene ever presented on the stage. In this scene a dozen chorus girls are dressing for the performance of a musical comedy in the chorus room of the Long Acre theater, New York. The girls are seen making up and dressing without a thought of the audience in front who are watching them.

Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Forsyth.)

It's been a long year since Jack Wilson contributed to the happiness of the Atlanta folk, and a regular army of admirers will welcome him when he appears at the Forsyth this week. The comedian will be assisted by Franklyn Batie and Ada Lane, and heads a fine bill. Mrs. Gene Hughes and her splendid company of players in Edgar Allen Woolf's novel comedy playlet, "Youth" will be an extra added attraction, and a treat. Mrs. Hughes is one of the most popular women in vaudeville and has surrounded herself with a combination of talent that will make her act a splendid attraction. Little Lord Robert, a handsome miniature man, the smallest comedian on earth, will be a feature that will praticularly appeal to the ladies and children, and interest the other Forsyth patrons, too. Harry B. Lester, an excellent entertainer, who is better known as the "jovial jester," will be another of the fine drawing cards. Charles Nevins and Ada Gordon will be introduced for the first time in the south. Their sketch, "Little Miss Manicure" will be livened with a novelty in the shape of a "female scarecrow." More and St. Clair and the Nicholas-Nelson troupe make up the bill.

"The Goose Girl."
(At the Lyric.)

Is a king in rags and a queen in tatters as lovable as in the purple and ermine? You can answer this question for yourself if you see the production of "The Goose Girl," which comes to the Lyric tonight for a week.

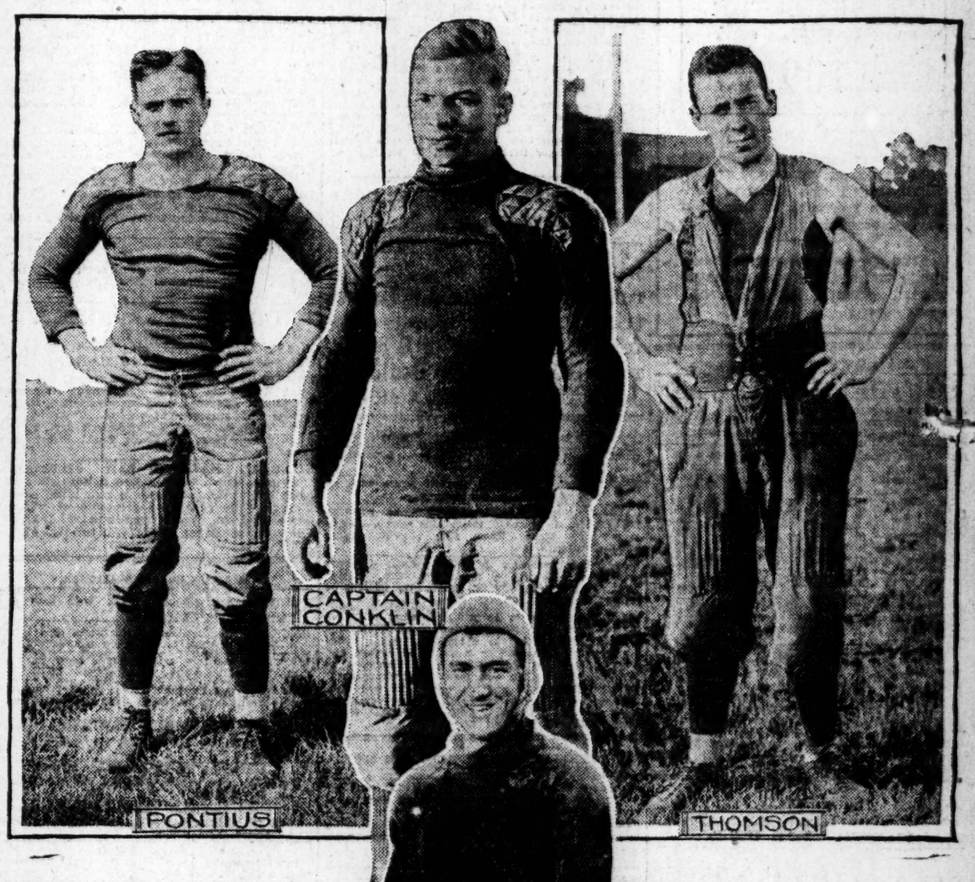

The company engaged in the portrayal of the different characters is said to be an ideal one, each member having been selected not only for capability, but further for the type created by the author. The scenic production is greatly enhanced by scenes of the locale of the play, which Mr. MacGrath himself photoed while in Europe.

Everywhere "The Goose Girl" has been enthusiastically received and Messrs. Baker and Castle are of the hope that audiences in Atlanta will fall in love with "The Goose Girl," the play as well as the character, as audiences everywhere else have already done.

At the Bijou.

The Bijou will open the week this afternoon with another very attractive vaudeville bill. The headliner of the bill will be the Three Zechs, the remarkable gymnasts, who will introduce something original in the acrobatic line. Others on the bill will be Kane, the ventriloquist, offering a laughable and unique act; Mann and Stewart, the blackface comedians in old time minstrelsy, and Crawford and Cappman, novelty singers and dancers. There will also be the illustrated songs, and the very best brand of motion pictures will open and close each performance. Matinees will be given daily at 2:30 and 4, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

SOME OF YOST'S MICHIGAN GRIDIRON WARRIORS, WHO ARE READY FOR CORNELL AND PENN.

Moving along with ever increasing momentum and leaving behind a gory trail in the middle west, the Michigan gridiron warriors are now ready to lay violent hands upon the moleskin warriors of Cornell and Pennsylvania. The team is not yet in world-beating form, but, to judge from present indications, is going to be considerably more than either the New York state eleven or the Quakers will be able to handle. There are weight, speed and cleverness waiting to be welded together into what western experts look upon as the most promising eleven Michigan has had in years. The Wolverenes have a wonderful fast back field. There is not one of the quarters who cannot negotiate a hundred yards in eleven seconds or less, and, besides, Carpel, Craig and McMillan are three of the best dodgers in the game this year. Thomson is hitting the line with a whole lot more steam and "get there" than he displayed last season, and the way Yost has them now in is the way the men will line up in the big games this year, barring accidents. Garrels, who is playing left end, is a brother of the famous Jimmy Garrels, of the '0-'06 team. Wells, an All-American end of last year, is again holding down a wing position. Coach "Hurry Up" Yost says he would not want a better man at tackle than Captain Conklin. Pontius, while a new man, has shown surprising strength as his leader's partner. The worst holes "Hurry Up" found to fill were the guards. Michigan felt a severe blow when she los Benzrook. So far Almendinger, a likely looking lineman, has been used as a guard, while the other guard has been Boyle, a veteran of last year's team. Petersen, a new man, is playing center. He promises to be as good as, if not better, than Cornwall, who played the position last year.

KING GEORGE AS AN AUTHOR; HIS SPEECHES IN BOOK FORM

London, November 5.—Royal authors are crowding the market in these democratic days. The Queen of Roumania is far better known under her pen name of "Carmen Sylva" than by her real name. The Queen of Italy has published poems, and the Kaiser has not disdained to appear in print. Various minor German royalties have added to their not too large incomes by literary labor, and now King George V. is about to publish his collected speeches, carefully edited by himself. The title is to be:

"The King to His People" (being the speeches and messages of His Majesty George V, as Prince and Sovereign.)

The book will be issued before the end of the year, and apart from its authorship it promises to be well worth reading, for King George always has something to say, and it might be much more interesting if he always were able to say all that was in his mind. The English monarch is so hedged about by etiquette, convention and the exigencies of his constitutional position that he must often leave the most significant things to speeches and confine himself to enunciating more or less commonplace truths.

Here are some quotations from his book which are received with respectful awe by his loyal subjects but which, when the glamor of royalty is removed from their authorship, read rather like a child' copybook maxims:

"Be thorough. Whatever you do, do it as well as you can. Put your whole heart and soul into it.

"Every day we recognize more fully the importance of education, not only to the individual life but to the life of the nation.

"Those who know the happiness of home life can sympathize with every effort made to secure similar blessings to their fellow creatures.

"The task of governing India will be made the easier if we on our part infuse into it a wide element of sympathy.

"Experience has shown that even in the case of firms having an established reputation and world-wide commerce, attempts to discontinue advertising have usually been followed by a diminution in the sales effected, and it is not unreasonable to assume that the neglect by Great Britain of one of the most important forms of national advertisement would be equally detrimental to her interests as a manufacturing country."

In the present day we have a plentiful crop of aristocratic writers. The Marchioness Townshend, who has several successful books to her credit already, is about to publish a volume of short stories. Lady Alix Egerton, daughter of Lord Ellesmere, has a book of verses in the press and the Countess of Warwick is a regular contributor to a number of the daily papers. Lady Gregory, of course, has achieved fame as a playwright, while the Countess of Cromartie and Lord Dunsany usually are bracketed together as the prophets of a new mystical school of writing.

It is not given to many people to read their own obituaries twice. This was the fate of Hesba Stretton, the famous English novelist, who really died a few days ago. Her death was announced erroneously in January, 1909, and again in February last, the mistake on this occasion being due to the death of her sister.

Hesba Stretton—her real name was Sarah Smith—was eighty years old. She was born at Church Stretton in Shropshire, and her pen name was taken from her birthplace. "Hesba" was made up of the initials of her own name and those of her four sisters.

Hesba Stretton owed her entry into the literary life partly to her elder sister, Elizabeth, and partly to Charles Dickins. She had written a little story for the amusement of her sisters, but Elizabeth kept the manuscript and posted it to "Household Words," of which Dickens was then the editor. Dickens sent back $25 by return of post and asked for more, and Hesba Stretton became a regular contributor.

Seven years later, in 1866, "Jessica's First Prayer" appeared in "The Sunday at Home." It made the magazine and when it was published in book form edition after edition was called for. More than a million copies were sold in England. It was translated into every European language and some Asiatic ones and a Russian Minister of Public Instruction made it a school text book. His successor, however, found it subversive in tendency and threw it out of the schools.

Hesba Stretton has lived in retirement for over twenty years but she kept at work until about five years ago. Her last book "Thoughts of Old Age for Many Minds" was published in 1906.

There are signs of a revival of the perennial discussion about the price of novels. About a year ago the 50 cent novel had a bit of a boom; but we don't hear much of it now and the publishers seem still to pin their faith to the $1.50 novel, sold at $1.12. The real trouble is that the great public won't buy novels now. It borrows them from the libraries instead and there is no more likelihood of the man—or woman—with a library subscription, squandering 50 cents on a book, which he never will want to see again after it is read, than there is of his squandering $1.12 or $1.50 or any other sum.

Young Aviator Injured.

Cleveland, Ohio, November 5.—Albert J. Engle, a young aviator, was painfully but not seriously injured and his machine was wrecked in a collision with a calf, following a short flight near Willoughby today. Engle was compelled to descend in a field. He alighted squarely on top of the calf. The animal escaped unhurt.

The Child's Heritage.

O there are those, a sordid clan,
With pride in gaud and faith in gold,
Who prize the sacred soul of man
For what his hands have sold!
And these shall deem thee humbly bred,
They shall not hear, they shall not see,
The kings among the mighty dead
Who walk and talk with thee.
I give thy feet the hopeful sod,
Thy mouth the priceless boon of breath;
The glory of the search for God
Be thine in life and death.
Unto thy flesh the restful grave,
Thy soul, the gift of being free;
The robe, the torch my fathers gave,
Thy father gives to thee!

—John G. Neihardt, in the November Forum.

BEAUTY SEEKERS BEWARE; THIS MAN MAY STING YOU

Ladies, beware!

There is a strange man amongst you. He is a fluent talker, well dressed, and is deceiving numbers ,disappointing many a hopeful heart and carrying away that which he will never replace.

He is a beauty agent, the man who sells a rose leaf complexion and an absence of freckles, all done up in a neat and handy package ready for use—or so you think. He claims to handle the "most remarkable beautifier and cleanser the world now knows" and the police are after him on complaint of a lady who says she has been cheated.

For—the beautifier is nothing in the wide, wide world but plain soap, cut in diminutive cubes to make you think it is scarce, and sold at fancy prices to add the lure of the unattainable. And you, or some of your sisters, have fallen for the fancy tale of the man with the red necktie, and are real angry even though his tale of the cleansing properties may be strictly true.

Just what he will be prosecuted for when caught is another story. He has made no false representations, for soap is a wonderful thing, even for ladies, and it is probable that a "doing business without a license" charge will be the only thing to convict him on.

The order from Chief Beavers recites the claims of the man, and the virtue of his wares, and adds that witnesses may be secured at 18 Ponders avenue.

COTTON WAS DULL ENTIRE FORENOON

Market Closed Steady at Net Loss of Two to Six Points. Spot Cotton Lower.

New York, November 4.—Dullness prevailed in the cotton market throughout the entire forenoon, and the close was steady at a net loss of 2 to 6 points.

The market opened with prices 3 to 6 points lower, in response to a little selling by room traders in the way of evening up accounts before the holiday and in anticipation of the census report next Wednesday morning. So little important news came in during the day that there was no incentive to broaden operations on operations on either side of the market. The further agitation in the south in favor of holding cotton was used as a basis for a little bull support of the market under the 9-cent level, although in most quarters it was considered that the remedy for low prices lay in a reduced acreage rather than in trying to create an artificial advance after a bumper crop had been produced.

The south was a moderate seller here this morning and helped filled up what little demand came in from room shorts. The China situation was still an uncertain factor in the situation, and in view of its importance at Manchester some were of the opinion that the next important move in prices would come from the Liverpool market and be downward unless the China situation improved materially.

Receipts at the ports today 55,000 bales, against 71,948 last week and 51,661 last year. For the week 450,000, against 489,168 last week and 378,049 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans 6,099, against 14,249 last year, and at Houston 22,779.

Cotton spot closed dull, 5 points lower; middling uplands 9.40; middling gulf 9.65. Total, 100 bales.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, November 4.—Spot cotton easy, unchanged; middling, 9¼; sales on the spot, 712 bales; to arrive, 1,350; low ordinary, 5 13-16, nominal; ordinary, 6⅝, nominal; good ordinary, 8 1-16; strict good ordinary, 8 7-16; low middling, 8¾; strict low middling, 9; middling, 9¼; strict middling, 9⅜; good middling, 9 9-16; strict good midling, 9⅝; middling fair, 10 1-16; middling fair to fair, 10 7-16; fair, 10 13-16, nominal; receipts, 6,099; stock, 109,641.

Cotton futures opened quiet at a decline of 3@5 points. Cables were indifferent. Brokers had few orders to fill, but longs seemed to desire to even up over the week-end and their offerings were more than the ring could absorb and prices were held down in the early trading, in the face of a none too good weather map and prospects of unsettled weather over Sunday. While the weather was warm over the cotton region it was cloudy with more or less rain. At the end of the first half hour of business, prices were 4@5 points under yesterday's close.

Cotton futures closed steady at a net decline of2 to 3 points.

SEEKING NEW CLOTHES, THIEVES LOOT A STORE

The postoffice at Silver Creek, Ga., some 5 miles this side of Rome, and the general merchandise store of J. B. Porter and Sons, where it was located, was robbed Saturday night, according to a report made here last night by a deputy sheriff of Floyd county.

A new winter outfit seemed to have been the main object of the robbery, for the two thieves left two dirty and muchly worn shirts, a pair of greasy neckties, and other articles of clothing scattered about the place, while they made off in brand-new stuff caluclated to last them through the cold season. A quantity of cakes and other eatables was consumed before they left the store.

Little was secured from the post-office—but a robbery is a robbery with Uncle Sam and there is $200 reward for each of the men. Some stamped envelopes and about $2.50 in money comprised the government loss, while the store also lost some $14 in cash.

NERVES STEADIER INGRAIN MARKET

Wheat, Corn and Oats Stronger—No Sign of Government Inquiry.

Chicago, November 4.—Steadier nerves enabled wheat traders today to ignore the bogy of federal inquiry as to an alleged corner. Many dealers expressed themselves as beginning to believe that there will be no serious investigation. Largely owing to this changed outlook, the market developed a stronger tone and closed at ¼ to ½ net advance. Other leading staples, too, all showed a gain—corn, ⅛@¼ to ¼@⅜; oats, ¼ to ⅜, an dhog products a shade to 12½.

It was apparent from the start that the feverishness of the last few days had disappeared from the wheat pit. No evidence of actfvity on the part of government representatives could be learned and speculators turned in relief to fix their minds more cheerfully on bullish crop conditions in the Argentine, Canada and elsewhere. As the day progressed, cash business picked up a little, flour sales improved and there was an export demand at Winnipeg. A good part of the ensuing advance was held, although the closing tone was easy at a level considerably under the top point reached. During the session, December ranged from 94⅛ to 95¼, with last sales ¼ up at 94⅜@94½.

Good butcher hogs, 140 to 160 average, 6¼ to 6¼.
Good butcher pigs, 90 to 120 average, 5¾ to 6¼.
Light pigs, 60 to 90 pounds, 5¾ to 6.
Heavy rough hogs, 250 to 300 average, 6 to 6¼.
Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs. Mast and peanut fattened hogs, 1 to 1½ cents under.

Choice Tennesse lambs, 4 to 5.
Medium to good lambs, 3½ to 4.
Good to fancy sheep, 2½ to 3½.

Cattle continue to come freely, especially from Tennessee points, running mostly medium grades. Cattle in good flesh in best demand, and bringing firm prices. Trade generally has been lighter this week, and a few odd lots will be carried over, but not sufficient number to necessarily influence a bad market for the first of the week. Shippers should wire their commission firms for market conditions before loading.

Receipts of sheep and lambs have been light, and quality not too goodd. Demand fair.

Hog receipts heavier. oMst too many light pigs coming, while prices have held reasonably firm. Unless there is a let-up in receipts, prices will probably work lower. Yards have managed to clean up pretty well for the week-end, but trade is less active than a week ago.

ALLEN PASSES QUIET SUNDAY

Garrison Still at the Police Station—Stearns Gives Bond.

J. P. Allen, the well-known merchant who was shot Saturday morning by an office boy, spent a quiet Sunday at St. Joseph's infirmary yesterday, where he was taken immediately after the shooting. It was reported that he had rested easily during the night, and that his condition was very satisfactory. Mr. Allen's wound is in the fleshy part of his neck. C. E. Pollard, also wounded, is not in any danger.

Moss Garrison, the 18-year-old boy who did the shooting, passed a more or less pleasant day in police barracks, where he will be held without bond until the legal moves commence in his case. He was visited by a number of people, including his mother and their lawyer, Colonel Latham.

"My boy is all right, and will come out all right," said Mrs. Garrison. "I certainly regret the shooting, but, under the circumstances, you or anyone else would have done the same thing. Moss is not implicated in any shortage."

Howard Stearns, Garrison's fellow clerk, whom he accused of the shortage in the C. O. D. department, which caused the shooting, was questioned by Mr. Allen and the expert accountants he had employed, Sunday made a complete confession of his part in the affair, according to the police.

It was said last night at police station that Stearns had admitted a shortage of approximately $170. Of this, it is reported that Stearns claims Garrison to have gotten one-half, or that each of them got about $85. Stearns was released on $200 bond.

EYES OF NATION ON KENTUCKY

Both Democrats and Republicans Concede Election Will Be Close.

Louisville, Ky., November 5.—Because of the state's varied political complexion in the past decade, the presidential election but a year off and reversals over a large part of the country a year ago, national political figures who have aided in the campaign which closes tomorrow night have said the eyes of the country are on Kentucky in the election of Tuesday. Both democrats and republicans concede the result will be close. The campaign has been almost devoid of vituperation. Neither side has had one paramount issue.

Both sides have declared for the county unit for prohibition elections, which was so much discussed in each convention. The only real contention has been the charges and counter-charges of both sides that the other has allied itself with the liquor interests.

At the last gubernatorial election the state went republican by 7,000 votes. Most conservative republicans predict this majority may be trimmed a little, but that approximately it will be held. Democrats say it will be wiped out, and James McCreary will be elected governor by from 2,500 to 10,000 majority.

Helping Judge Edward C. O'Rear, republican candidate for governor, has been United States Senator W. O. Bradley, who has stumped a large part of the state. To help McCreary, Congressman Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, democratic floor leader, has made speeches here and William J. Bryan last week spent several days in the western section of the state.

It has been planned to have President Taft come to Hodgenville to dedicate the Lincoln memorial monument a few days before the election, but arrangements had to be changed because of the embarrassing position it might put the president in. Mr. Taft will be in Kentucky the day after the election.

Because of a large mountain area in the state very often adequate returns are not received for thirty-six and even forty-eight hours after the polls close, and if the vote is as close as both sides expect, it is possible the outcome will not be known Tuesday night. Both democrats and republicans have full tickets in the field.

BARKENTINE WRECKED; CREW REPORTED SAFE

The Craft Runs Aground Near Sapelo—Vessel and Cargo Total Loss.

Brunswick, Ga., November 5.—(Special.)—The Barkentine, Sunbeam, bound from New Bedford, Mass., to Brunswick for a cargo of lumber from the Forest Lumber Company, was wrecked between Sapelo Island and Little St. Simons Island. The crew is reported safe at Sapelo light.

Very little information can be obtained about the wreck, or how she was lost. It appears that she ran aground near Sapelo, or off the North Breakers, in that vicinity. Thursday, the tugs E. F. Coney and Inca went to the Sunbeam's rescue off Sapelo. Nothing could be seen of the vessel, or wreck, and the boats returned without a trace of the Barkentine. It was thought that she had gotten off the shoals, and had gone to pieces at sea, and that the crew had escaped to the Brunswick lightship, but information received today was to the effect that the crew had reached Sapelo light. Just what became of the barkentine, or how she was wrecked, has not yet been learned.

STATE OF CHAOS EXISTS IN CHINA

whole province will declare for the republic. Word has reached here that the rebels have taken Kiating Fu, in Sze Chuan province, and have issued passports to the missionaries.

A foreign traveler, just returned from Sian Fu, in Shen Si province, reports that district in the wildest disorder. Former soldiers were looting everywhere, and there was no trace of government troops. The rebels at Sian Fu asserted that all the officials, from treasurer at Taotai, had been killed, as well as the Manchus, men, women and children.

50,000 Persons Killed at Hankow.

According to Chinese reports 50,000 persons have been killed at Hankow by bullets, fire and the sword.

The national assembly held a private meeting today to decide whether it was advisable to dissolve the assembly, in view of the want of confidence shown by the Lanchau troops and the provincial assemblies. The president pointed out that it would be impossible for the assembly to lay down its burden until parliament was ready to take it up. Finally the members agreed not to dissolve.

The Pekin chamber of commerce is organizing a commercial police force to protect subscribers' property in event of rebellion in the capital.

PERFECT ORDER AT SHANGHAI
WHERE THE REBELS CONTROL

Shanghai, November 5.—The first night after the capitulation of the city to the revolutionists passed uneventfully. Perfect order was maintained in Shanghai and the outlying districts, which is a remarkable feature of the movement.

Li Ping-Shu is the responsible head of the new administration in the native city and suburbs, and now is engaged in completing his organization. He informed the correspondent that he recognized only the "republic of Han," and would guarantee order. The only disorderly elements, he said, now in China, are the former officials, their supporters and the Manchu troops, who would never again be permitted to control.

Want Emperor to Abdicate.

There is reason to believe the revolutionary sentiment throughout the south strongly favors the unconditional abdication of the emperor and the establishment of an entirely new regime. Yuan-Shi-Kai will be repudiated if he adheres to the Manchus. He might become the head of the government and receive universal support if he separates himself from his former alliance. There is, however, a growing suspicion and distrust of Yuan-Shi-Kai.

Present plans for a republic include complete control of the Yang-Tse-Kiang. Admiral Sah now is crippled and cut off from his base. The revolutionary leaders are determined to avoid bloodshed and have Manchu troops in the various southern towns capitulate. Huang-Sing, the revolutionary leader in the Yang-Tse delta, arrived in the native city of Shanghai yesterday by motor car. Today he was engaged with other chiefs in a conference.

Foreign Guard Withdrawn.

Late last night the rebels succeeded in satisfying the officials of the Nanking-Shanghai railway that they were capable of preserving order, and the foreign guard, which had been placed at the railway station by order of the British consul, was withdrawn, the revolutionists taking posession.

The entire surroundings of Shanghai, including Wu-Sung, are now in rebel hands. The serving out of arms continued today.

Three loyalist gunboats and one transport, part of Admiral Sah's fleet put into Shanghai today for provisions and munitions, ignorant of the fact that the arsenal had changed hands. They are now in the river, loyal for the time being, but the officers of the warships are nervous.

Subscriptions are pouring in for the revolutionary cause.

The revolutionists maintain that no concession on the part of the throne will avail while the Manchus remain in power. A meeting of the Kiang-Su, Che-Kiang and Fukien gentry today stigmatized the national assembly, as not representing the country. Revolutionary proclamations abolish the Likin and land taxes, the maritime customs only being retained.

Hang Chow Captured.

Hang Chow, capital of the province of Che-Kiang, was captured today, the governor being made prisoner, but the Tartar city held out against the rebels for a time. The fighting was furious, but did not last long.

Soo Chow, in the province of Kiang-Su, on the grand canal, has gone over to the rebels, the governor and all the officials, together with the soldiers, having acquiesced peacefully in the rising, while Kashing and Ningpo also have fallen.

The remainder of Admiral Saeh's fleet has arrived at Wu-Sung, without ammunition and without provisions.

Reports are numerous of the defection or the capture of various other Chinese cities, these including Wu-Hu and Foo Chow. The imperial telegraph operators have gone on strike. They demand three months' pay in advance.

It is reported that Yuan Shi Kai is at Hankow negotiating with General Li, leader of the rebels, who is in a position to dictate terms. It is believed the south will demand the retirement of the Manchu royalty with a pension, and will not be satisfied with less.

The revolutionary leaders at Shanghai today expressed no fear that the imperialists would attempt to recapture the city. They said that the new government was fully competent to control the situation and protect foreign interests.

HAD PICK OF 585 GIRLS AND HE GOT A LEMON

King Says He Wants a Legal Separation From Girl He Picked.

Fairfield, Ill., November 5.—After he had received 585 answers to his advertisement for a wife, Henry V. King, an orchardist, chose from his list Miss Bessie Southers, of Centerville, Ky., and they were married a month ago; but Mrs. King has disappeared, and her husband started for Kentucky today in search of her.

"I only want a legal separation now," said King. "Just think—I had my pick of 585 candidates, and got a lemon. She left me after a little quatrel." King is 53 year, old.

test, the voters of Massachusetts Tuesday will decide whether Governor Eugene N. Foss, democrat, shall be given a second term or whether his young opponent, Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham, shall return the state to the republican column. Other state officers and a new legislature also will be elected.

National issues have played an unusually important part in the campaign. The tariff has been a fruitful theme, the republicans urging the voters to stand by the party policy at Washington.

In the closing hours Governor Foss added an interesting issue by asking the Suffolk county district attorney to take action against republican leaders both in and out of the state, including former President Roosevelt, the two Massachusetts senators, republican committeemen and prominent corporations, on the ground that the laws of the state prohibiting the attacking of candidates by means of unsigned articles had been violated.

He declared also that the republicans had been asking political contributions from corporations and insurance companies, which is against the law.

Governor Foss claims a victory by 50,000, while the republican state committee thinks Frothingham will win by 35,000.

RHODE ISLAND CAMPAIGN
HAS BEEN MOST STRENUOUS

Providence, R. I., November 5.—Tomorrow night will end a campaign as strenuous as this state has witnessed in recent years. Not only have the large textile manufacturers come out openly to work for the re-election of Governor Adam J. Pothier and the other republican candidates, but United States Senator Henry F. Lippett, himself a cotton manufacturer, took the stump and campaigned the state in person.

Rhode Island has been unused to seeing its senators work even for their own election.

The avowed issue which drew Senator Lippett and the textile manufacturers into the campaign is the tariff.

Governor Pothier made his campaign almost entirely on state issues. He is opposed for re-election by Lewis A. Waterman, democrat, who last year reduced the governor's record plurality of 11,769, in 1909, to 1,140, in 1910.

The democrats have made the old property qualifications law, which makes it essential for voters for certain offices to be taxed on at least $134 worth of personal property, their chief issue.

CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK
MARKED BY GREAT APATHY

New York, November 5.—After a campaign of unusual apathy, even for an off year, and in striking contrast to the hard-fought gubernatorial battle of a year ago, the voters of New York Tuesday will elect members of the lower house of the legislature, certain county officers and judiciary candidates in various districts.

Aside from the fight for control of the assembly, political interest largely has centered in the campaign in this city for judiciary and county candidates.

Opposed to the regular democratic or Tammany ticket are nominees representing a fusion of republicans, some independent democrats and the Independence League, long known as the William R. Hearst organiaztion.

The one striking feature of the campaign was the airing of a scandal over judiciary nominations in the Brooklyn-Queens district, where tentative charges have been made against democratic leaders of conspiring to bring about the nomination of former Congressman William Willet for the supreme court bench. It has been charged that money was unlawfully used.

The issue, as a whole, seems largely one of Tammany and anti-Tammany.

SOCIALISM PLAYS BIG PART IN OHIO MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Columbus, Ohio, November 5.—Socialism will play a big part in municipal elections throughout Ohio Tuesday. That a larger socialist vote will be polled than ever before is admitted by both democratic and republican leaders. They add, however, that the third party will capture nothing more than minor offices. In some cities the campaign has been bitter, and points of contention in the many centers cover almost all well-known municipal issues.

MUCH INTEREST MANIFESTED
IN THE NEW JERSEY FIGHT

Trenton, N. J., November 5.—More than the usual interest is being taken in the off-year election in New Jersey this fall owing to the activity taken by Governor Woodrow Wilson in behalf of the democratic legislative candidates. The governor has spoken in almost every county in the state.

In his speeches Governor Wilson has denounced "bossism," his denunciation of political methods in Atlantic City being unusually severe. He referred to that city as a "city of shame" and to the political leaders as "political plunderers."

The republican leaders cleaim that they will have a majority in the next house and will retain control of the senate. The democrats say they will retain their present majority in the house and that they will elect a majority in the upper branch.

SHE USED ARSENIC TO SEASON FOOD

have been examined. The police are aroused and are determined that the woman shall stand trial on the charge of murdering their comrade.

Since learning that they had been seasoning their food with pepper from a tin can that stood beside a similar can filled with enough poison to cause the deaths of a hundred men, the police guards and matron have had no food prepared on the Vermilya premises. The meals of the watchers are cooked at a nearby restaurant in the presence of a policeman and brought in by a waiter under guard.

During one of the lucid moments that broke the delirium following the taking of poison, Mrs. Vermilya today denied to the police that she had attempted to end her life. The poison in the tin box was an insect powder, she said. She declared that the nurses had given her the wrong shaker.

Mrs. Vermilya's statement was made some time after toxicologists had agreed that the poison was an arsenical preparation.

The woman's condition remained critical tonight.

After a conference between State's Attorney Wayman, Police Inspector Wheeler, and Captain Harding, it was announced that a warrant charging Mrs. Vermilya with the murder of Bissonnette would be served tomorow and the woman placed in the hospital in the county jail.

The Woman Talked Freely.

Captain Harding, after questioning Mrs. Vermiliya, gave out a staement.

"Mrs. Vermilya talked freely," said Captain Harding. 'She firmly maintained that she had not poison'd either Bissonette or Smith. She also denied that she had attempted to poison herself.

"She said that she had purchased some roach powder and had put it in a talcum powder box. So said she had three talcum boxes in her pantry. In one was black pepper, in another white pepper and in the third the roach powder. We have been able to find only two such boxes.

"I tol her the chemists had found arsenic in the box, and not roach powder, but she could not account for this. I attached no importance to her denials and am satisfied that there were but the two boxes in the house, one containing arsenic."

Portions of the body of Conductor Richard T. Smith, who died at Mrs. Vermilya's home last March, were brought here today from North Henderson, Ill., where they were exhumed for examination for traces of arsenic.

Dr. E. L. Hertel, who attended Smith when he died, said today that he now had no doubt that Smith died of ar-

Pasadena. He remained there until after 3 o'clock, renewing his supply of gasoline, and refilling the tank of the leaky radiator that brought him near disaster yesterday.

After leaving Pomona, Rodgers kept his biplane pointing upward until he had climbed over the fleecy sheets of vapor flowing near the tops of the highest peaks of the mountains. He sped on to the finish at Tournament park, on a level with the Mount Wilson observatory and flying close to the ragged sides of the mountain.

Uses a "Baby" Wright.

His machine, a "baby" Wright, that has only an 18-foot spread of wings, seemed to hesitate for an instant as the aviator careened it into the spiral glide. At this time he was directly over the park, but as he came down his flier described ever widening curves until he was within a few hundred feet of the ground. Then Rodgers performed one of the dips Arch Hoxsey was taking when he was killed at Dominguez Field, within sight of Mount Wilson, last December.

Rodgers' first word after he had been finally rescued from the clamorous crowd, was:

"Well, one thing is certain, you cannot do a trans-continental flight in thirty days."

Rodgers also declared that his own flight began September 17 and finished today, forty-nine days later, would not be duplicated for a year or more.

Fowler Reaches El Paso.

El Paso, Texas, November 5.—Robert G. Fowler, the aviator, arrived here at 3:10 o'clock this afternoon, by train, unhurt, after an accident which compelled him to leave his biplane about one mile from Mastodon, N. M., 14 miles west of El Paso.

Fowler had made 200 miles since leaving Douglas, Ariz., this morning, when one of the sparkers on his engine failed to work and compelled him to descend. He struck the earth with some force, but his machine was not badly damaged. He will return to Mastodon on the morning train, and expects to fly into this city before noon tomorrow.

for "Little Joe" in the near future.

Judge W. R. Jones, of Greenville, will address a Joe Brown meeting at Gainesville Tuesday.

Colonel W. C. Bunn, of Cedartown, has accepted an invitation to speak on behalf of the former governor at Lafayette, Walker county, next Saturday.

G. R. Hutchens, of Rome, will speak at Hazlehurst next Saturday.

During the present week the managers of Governor Brown's campaign will complete the organization of his forces throughout the state. They declare that they will have the best political organization ever known in Georgia. Many of the clubs that were active in 1908 or 1910 have been reorganized or will be re-formed immediately.

They declare that there have been but few defections from the ranks of "Little Joe," and that each of these can be matched by numerous accessions from the old opposition.

Judge Longley's Statement.

They call attention to the following statement made by Judge F. M. Longley, of LaGrange, while here a few days ago:

"My observation has been that the supporters of Governor Brown in the last primary will stand by him in the approaching one. I know of no Brown deflections in Troup, but quite a number of prominent men who voted against him in the last election are now for him. His wise, conservative and business administration, under which prosperity abounded, has inspired the people, as never before, with real confidence in the man. The spirit of ridicule, personal and otherwise, heretofore hurled at him by the enemy, for political aggrandizement, like the chaff before the wind or the froth of sillibub, has vanished, leaving what and cream, and the country now sees in him a man of the people, in full sympathy with their struggles—sees in him the best elements of manhood, so mixed and tempered with wisdom, justice and moderation, as to exemplify Georgia's noble motto. Furthermore, the people are not unmindful of an unbroken custom of the party, to indorse an executive whose administration has measured up to their demands, and will not in this instance. True, in the case of Governor Smith, the the indorsement come a little late, but it came, after a rebuke to him of his treatment of Commissioner Brown by kicking him out of office, because of inability to control him. I only mention this as showing the forgiving spirit of Georgians—that, while they sharply rebuke their public servants as occasion may demand, they never withhold to one the plaudit of 'well done, thou good and faithful servant,' whose official conduct has been wise, honest, faithful and above just criticism. Now that the executive committee has eliminated the whisky question, refusing to submit it to the white vote as an issue, and with an unsurpassed record as governor, the highway for a second term for Governor Brown looks luminous: 93,000 to start with and more to follow."

GRANT BLDG. SMITH, HAMMOND & SMITH ATLANTA, GA

ATLANTA THEATERS DOING FINE BUSINESS THIS YEAR

There's no doubt about the fact that Atlanta's a good theater town. "It's the best in the south," said Jake Wells recently, and he has reason to know.

Backing up his statement, proof can be found almost any time a really good show is to be seen at the higher priced houses, and at the popular priced ones there is always a crowd of proportions sufficient to make the manager feel glad he is on earth.

This year has been a particularly good one; that is, in Atlanta. Road managers, however, do not say so much for many of the other cities of the country.

Every worth-while show this year has been greeted by paying houses. That Atlantans want amusement was clearly shown during the past week.

The Grand was dark, but the Atlanta, the Lyric and the Forsyth were running full tilt.

At the Atlanta Held did a phenomenal business for the four performances. The last half of the week was given up to Tanguay's attempts to please, and while she didn't particularly succeed, the magic of her name was sufficient to make it a most profitable engagement.

Al G. Fields never played before to as much money as he did on the last engagement in Atlanta. "Alma" did a ripping business, and so has every other show, which possessed genuine merit. At the Grand "The Chocolate Soldier" played a week to fair business, despite the fact that the show was playing in Atlanta for the second time. But the company was a most capable one and deserved its financial return.

And all through the week that Held and Tanguay were drawing folks to the Atlanta, the Forsyth was doing an excellent business, with the Lyric having no cause to complain. In fact, with the Forsyth it was next to the biggest week in the history of the house—with only one bigger, the Kellerman engagement.

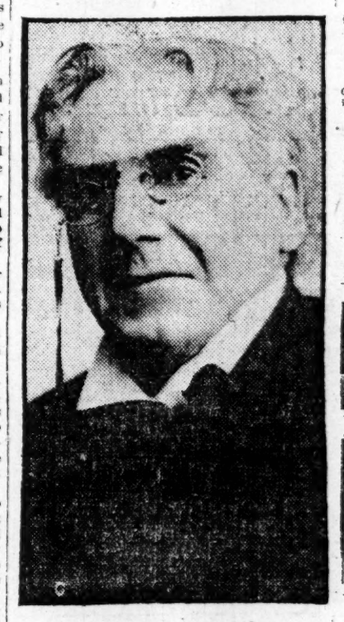

There was a reason for the success of the Forsyth last week. The bill was worthy of attention. It was the best of the year; some people say the best ever seen here. It came after several other bills, which were average vaudeville, and no more. It is promised that last week's success will be duplicated right along.

Tyrus Cobb is an actor now, and the measure of his ability in this new line will be judged by the Atlanta theatergoers when he appears here on November 23-24-25 in "The College Widow," in which there has been one great change, it is said—the football game has been switched to a baseball game. Manager Homer George has just received notice of the dates.

"Daddy" Lewis, one of the best of the old school of actors and a favorite wherever he goes, on stage and off, is with us again, this time in "The Goose Girl," a dramatization of MaGrath's novel of that name. "Daddy" was here last year with "Graustark," and while in the city made more warm personal friends than any actor who appeared in Atlanta during the season.

Many there are who know actors only by newspaper report in which scandals, freak advertising and fast living figure. "Daddy" is not one of that sort. He is a devout Catholic, is intensely devoted to the stage, and has for it a respect and a love which ever keeps him in harness. He is over 60 now, but as active as many a man of half his years.

He played with all the old-timers, and by them all was appreciated for his ability as stage director and as actor. He has been with Mansfield, Mantell, Forrest, Cushman and other noted actors in his time. At present he is playing the role of the old German in "The Goose Girl" and keeping an eye on the other members of his company to see that everything goes along without a hitch.

JAMES LEWIS,
Known to stage people as "Daddy."
He is in Atlanta for a week.

The Orpheum is in condition to be opened tomorrow morning, if need be, but for some reason Mr. Wells and his people are keeping very quiet. That the house is ready was shown beyond a question of a doubt last week, when the "Miss Fix-It" company were granted permission to use it for a rehersal. Then it was seen that the house was in shape.

Frank Payne, a member of the Werba and Leuscher forces at present, was in Atlanta with the "Fix-It" company as the result of an accident in another city. He was caught between a baggage car and a truck, and was given such a squeeze he was in the city until Sunday. He had been identified with the Savage forces for four years before joining the new firm. Four new girls join the "Fix-It" company in Chattanooga, and with Miss Tanguay in the leading role new life will be injected into the performance.

Norah Bayes and Jack Norwich, who left "Miss Fix-It," presumably because of an illness to Miss Bayes, have returned to vaudeville. Miss Bayes' voice has suddenly and wonderfully recovered and everybody seems glad to her it. The popular team may be seen in Atlanta before the season's end.

Good news. Lillian Gonne, the sauciest and the sprightiest of all the Gus Edwards girls, will pay a visit to Atlanta next week, appearing at the Forsyth with the "School Boys and Girls," an old act made over into a new hit. Boys on the front row had better watch out. Lillian's act last year was a soul kiss, after a leap from the stage.

Manager Thomas Campbell, of the Crescent and the Tulane, of New Orleans paid a visti to Atlanta last week and before his return had a handshake and a little confab, with his old friend, Homer George, manager of the Atlanta. ROBERT MORAN.

endowment for the upiversity. At present the endowment is $200,000; the property and equipment of the school being worth $750,000. The present campaign is to raise a $2,000,000 endowment fund, to add new departments to the present curriculum, and to establish in connection with the university an institution similar in its relation as that of Barnard Female college to Columbia university.

A plan originated by S. C. DeSaussure, of Atlanta, and elaborated by Bishop C. K. Nelson, whereby the university endowment will be materially increased by co-operative work among the twenty-one dioceses of the Southern Episcopal church, was a feature of the campaign mentioned by Dr. Claiborne. Several of the trustees of the school are residents of Atlanta and all of these are strong in their determination to make the university the greatest in the south.

The alumni have already raised $100,000, which is designated the Benjamin Lawton Wiggins endowment fund in memory of that educator, who, in spite of the fact that he was repeatedly offered princely salaries by other colleges, remained with the university until his death. It was he who stressed the fact which has in recent years become universally popular—that the college of the future will be removed from the manifold temptations so alluringly offered in the cities.

Following the sermon of Dr. Claiborne a voluntary contribution was made by church members present, $100 being given. Later it is expected this amount will be largely increased. Christ church, of Nashville, Tenn., holds the record for helpfulness, having contributed $6,000 in the past six months.
